Canada and U. S. Agree To Exchange Defense Materials, Facilities

Dominion to Provide This Country Up to $300,000,000 of Needed Supplies

By Frank L. Kluckhorn
Copyright by New York Times

Hyde Park, N. Y., April 20.—An agreement between Canada and the United States by which the economies of the two countries will be merged to a considerable extent for the production of war materials for British aid and hemispheric defense was announced here in a joint statement tonight by President Roosevelt and W. L. Mackenzie King, Canadian Prime Minister and war leader.

Canada will ship the United States munitions, strategic materials and ships needed here, while the United States will supply Canada in turn with numerous defense articles which Canada must still obtain here. The United States will pay Canada $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 for the supplies to be obtained in the northern Dominion, thereby helping the Dominion pay for materials she must buy here.

Although there was nothing in the statement that the greatly increased collaboration of the two neighbors would go beyond the economic and productive fields, reports circulated that cooperation of other sorts would grow out of this arrangement. Specifically, it was rumored that Canada was seeking transfer of American troops to Canada to replace Canadian troops being sent to Britain, and empire defense points. The idea was that such transfer would further secure this hemisphere from attack. There was no official confirmation of such reports.

Lend-Lease Agreement

The agreement stipulated that in so far as Canada's defense purchases in the United States consist of component parts to be used in equipment and munitions which Canada is producing for Britain, Britain will obtain the parts under the Lease-Lend Act and forward them to Canada for use in the finished article. Thus, Canada will not have to pay henceforth for many of the supplies eventually destined for Britain.

This agreement is expected to make for speedier production of the ainews of war which Britain so

D. C. Firemen Help

Wind-Driven Brush Fires Imperil Town in Maryland

Many Buildings Razed Near Pittsville; Rural Areas Also Hard Hit

Firemen and CCC youths yesterday battled forest and field fires that swept over thousands of acres in nearby Maryland and Virginia. Reports from other sections of both States indicated the outbreak of fires was general.

In the Washington area the principal blazes were at Suitland, Md., at Franconia and Centerville in Fairfax County, Va., and near Cherrydale, Arlington, Va.

Officials reported a forest blaze at Fort Meade and that a fire of "huge proportions" which had destroyed several churches and a number of homes and was threatening the town of Pittsville on Maryland's Eastern Shore, according to the Associated Press.

Two District of Columbia companies and 14 Prince Georges volunteer fire companies fought the blaze at Suitland all day. Towering smoke and flames could be seen for miles. Firemen reported one barn and several farm outbuildings had been destroyed, but that several hundred homes in the path of the fire had been saved.

The more than 300 county firemen, who responded to the general alarm, were assisted by 28 CCC youths from Fort Dupont under the leadership of S. Mattia and F. E. Papuga, foreman.

The fire swept over more than 300 acres, including both timber land and fields, between the Marlboro Pike and the southern Maryland Pike and in the vicinity of Suitland and Silver Hill.

Three fire officials narrowly escaped being burned when they were trapped in the woods by the wind-driven flames. They were Capt. George Madden, Lieut. John Simmons and Chief Frank Briguglio, of the Capitol Heights company, who escaped to safety by following a

City Swelters As Mercury Goes to 94

Hottest April Day Since 1929; Cars Jam Roads for Miles, Bumper to Bumper

April did its worst in and near Washington yesterday.

The temperature rose to 94 degrees; woods fires outlined the city in two directions; dust blew frequently in wide yellow clouds; there were 24 fire alarms in the District up to 6 p. m., a half-dozen rescues on the river, and traffic congestion in Potomac Park exceeded that of Easter Sunday.

Relief is promised for today. The prediction was fair and much cooler, with a high of 70 and minimum of 60. Yesterday's 94 was the highest temperature for the date on record here, the highest for April since 1929 and was within two degrees of the record for April, 96 in 1915. The record high occurred only a month following the winter's coldest weather. On March 18 the mercury fell to 15.

Park police estimated there were 20,000 more automobiles at the Tidal Basin and its vicinity than the 40,000 during the peak of the Easter tourist travel there.

An 8-year-old boy and a Fort Belvoir soldier were killed in 2 of 49 traffic accidents which marred an otherwise perfect motoring Sunday and sent a number of persons to hospitals in and near Washington.

Many, driven by the heat to Potomac Park, motored in unbroken processions all day long around the basin. Others crowded the seawall, and saw small boats pitching about, and frequently called harbor police, believing the craft were in distress.

Boat Driven Ashore

Maryland police and the Coast Guard at Annapolis conducted a fruitless search of Chesapeake Bay in the vicinity of North Beach yesterday for Ray Williams, 22, who had been visiting the North Beach Park home of Mrs. Don Clark, of Washington.

Policeman J. Bruce Lyons reported that Williams had gone out in the bay at 9 a. m., apparently for a morning row. At a late hour last night he had not returned. Police said it was possible that Williams had been driven to shore in the rough water, and was trying to make his way back by land.

The 11½-foot Catspaw, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George Dankers, 846 South Highland Street, Arlington, Va., capsized in the rough Georgetown Channel south of the Highway Bridge. The Catspaw was washed over the seawall and lay in the park.

Mr. and Mrs. Dankers were rescued by Harbor Police Sergeant R. M. Cox and Private H. S. Carrico.

Allies in Retreat, With Greeks Breaking Up, Germans Assert; Rumanian Civil War Reported

Iron Guard Believed Starting Revolt; Machine-Gun Firing Heard in Hungary

By International News Service

Budapest (Monday), April 21.—Civil war was reported raging in Rumania early today with army troops loyal to Premier Antonescu striving to put down a rebellion led by the Iron Guard with Communist and Peasant Party elements joining in.

The sound of heavy machine-gun firing could be heard at points along the Rumanian-Hungarian frontier throughout Sunday night and into the early hours of this morning, it was reported.

Rumanian refugees reaching frontier towns asserted that the fighting began in some places Saturday night but flared into nationwide rebellion Sunday.

They declared that Gen. Antonescu had formally declared all members of the Iron Guard "enemies of the state" and had rushed his best troops into action to quell the uprising.

The premier was said to be holding tank units of the army in readiness for action if the situation threatened to get out of hand.

Thus far, there was no indication of the extent of the rebellion, whether it was confined to rural areas or whether fighting had broken out in Bucharest.

Disclosure that actual fighting had broken out followed earlier announcement that Rumania was on the verge of civil war with the point at issue appearing to be the determination of certain groups, notably the Iron Guard, to regain territory ceded to Hungary and Bulgaria in the 1940 Treaty of Vienna.

Gunfire Day and Night

By the Associated Press

Budapest, April 20.—Hungarian circles today interpreted a strongly worded patriotic message by Premier Antonescu to his people as indicating a clean break with the Axis.

The Rumanians were reported in a Transylvanian dispatch to have halted traffic along the Bulgarian and Hungarian borders, with gunfire heard day and night from guards shooting anyone who attempted to leave the country.

Antonescu, in an Easter message yesterday (today is the Orthodox Church Easter) spoke of Rumanian reverses and loss of territory, but declared "justice and God's love will save us and the Rumanian people will rise again from death."

He also said the Rumanian army was ready to fight and quoted an order his army command that "it is the holy duty of the army to wipe out the shameful blot of 1940."

If the premier's message meant that he has broken with the Axis,

Spoils of War

Axis Reported Readying Plans To Partition Yugoslavia

Italy May Get Dalmatian Coast, Hungary And Bulgaria Believed Due for Slices

By the Associated Press

Berlin, (Monday) April 21.—With the Greek war entering what the Germans called the final phase, thoughts turned here today for the moment to political readjustments of the Balkans.

Official and authorized quarters remained silent but reports persisted that there would be a "conference of victors" almost immediately to shape the broad outlines of the Axis' new order in the southeast.

Vienna reported—but it could not be verified—that King Boris, of Bulgaria, had arrived there.

There also were reports that Italian leaders were on the way.

The impression prevailed that the collapse of Yugoslavia had raised political problems of such urgency that at least a tentative adjustment was necessary before conclusion of the Greek campaign.

Such questions as the borders of the independent Croat state and what portions of former Yugoslavia would be given to Hungary and Bulgaria and possibly Rumania were clamoring for adjustment.

It was unofficially reported in Berlin that Bulgarian troops had penetrated to Skoplje, Yugoslavia, occupying this city which they called "historically Bulgarian."

Hot Pursuit

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 20.—The war in Greece was described in German dispatches tonight as a hot chase across the Plains of Thessaly, south of Larisa, with the British and Greeks in full retreat.

In places, according to military reports, the Greek army was falling to pieces, while the British were trying in greatest haste to reach ports.

Compare It to Dunkerque

The German high command announced earlier that the Nazi forces had stormed through the British mountain defenses to Trikkala on the Thessalonian Plains, while the Greeks on the west were falling back "apparently disbanding in some places" before the Italian advance.

The commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland said the British were heading for Lamia and the ports of Volos and Khalkis.

It declared there was only one highway south of Larisa and the Nazi air force was concentrating its attacks on this road.

The words "a second Dunkerque" appeared with increasing frequency in the German dispatches.

Several reports told of Greek surrenders in company and regimental units. The supposition here of considerable confusion and disintegration among the Greek forces was based on the fact that prisoners captured represented various divisions which, apparently, had been mixed up.

Town of 22,000

Trikkala is an important railway center 45 miles southwest of Mount Olympus. Its capture represented an advance of about 100 miles of tough going through the mountains of northern Greece from Yugoslavia, and placed the Nazis within 150 miles of Athens.

Possession of this town of 22,000 population apparently meant Nazi command of a 40-mile strip stretching eastward to Larisa, which the Germans announced yesterday had been captured. Both towns are con-

U. S. May Act In Soft-Coal Tie-up Today

President Also Expected to Confer On G. M. Strike Threat

Amid many forecasts of quick governmental action to end the soft coal impasse, Southern operators last night made a new proposal to the United Mine Workers for reopening their mines.

A telegram to John L. Lewis, union president, from L. Ebersole Gaines, chairman of the Southern operators, suggested that the men return to work following their three-week stoppage, under working conditions that existed under the previous two-year contract, but with an approximate 11 per cent increase in daily pay.

Earlier, Gaines had proposed a resumption of negotiations between the two groups in Washington today, but Lewis insisted that the conference be held in New York, where he is currently engaged in other conferences. Last night's telegram said the Southern operators, who bolted the Appalachian conference rather than give up their 40-cents-a-day wage differential as Northern operators and the union suggested, said they would meet Lewis here "entirely at your convenience to negotiate with you any and all matters necessary to develop a contract to expire March 31, 1943."

Since Lewis and the union already have agreed with the Northern operators on a new contract providing a straight $7 a day wage, as compared with the old rate of $6 in the North and $5.60 in the South, some observers here saw little chance of his being willing to agree to different terms for the Southern mines.

No official would forecast the nature of governmental action that might be taken in the dispute, though certification of the dispute, or phases of it, to the National Defense Mediation Board, despite the protest of Lewis, was most widely

Japanese Talk Of War on U.S. By Axis, Soviet

May Come by June, Newspapers Predict; Troops Are Shifted

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, April 20.—A portion of the Japanese press declared today that "it no longer is a crazy dream to expect a great war with Japan, Germany, Italy and Soviet Russia on one side, and the United States, Britain and China on the other."

The newspaper Miyako, which was joined in this line of thought by other papers, said possible war between Germany and the United States would necessarily lead to "war between Japan and the United States," and that this war might come before June.

At the same time, Japan and the Soviets appeared to be accepting their neutrality pact of a wek ago at face value.

It was learned that there have been recent removals of Japanese troops in Manchukuo toward the south, in a direction indicating they were not bound for China, while the well informed newspaper Nichi Nichi reported that visas for foreign travel on Russia's transsiberian railway have been banned through May 3.

This may mean that Russia, too, is moving her Far Eastern army, considered her best, toward a more troubled eastern Europe. Moscow dispatches, however, said nothing was known concerning the reported suspension of passenger traffic on the Trans-Siberian.

Signing of the Japanese-Russian pact April 13 was accompanied by a declaration pledging mutual recognition of Manchukuo and outer Mongolian frontiers defended by Japan and Soviet Russia.

Observers have suggested that faith on both sides in this agreement would permit the Japanese to weaken their Manchukuo garrison for any southward move she may contemplate, and at the same time

Hitler Offers Peace for Vichy Collaboration

Fuehrer Sends Note To Petain, Insists Laval Be Reinstated

By the United Press

Vichy, April 20.—Adolf Hitler has dispatched a message to Marshal Petain agreeing to resume French-German "collaboration" and begin negotiations on a permanent peace treaty providing Pierre Laval returns to the French government, it was revealed tonght.

Hitler's message, seeking a compromise means of breaking the fourmonth-old deadlock in French-German relations, was said authoritatively to have reached Paris and to contain a reply to Vichy's demands that he make some sort of concessions toward an understanding.

The Fuehrer's note was understood to indicate a willingness to proceed with "collaboration" on condition that Laval, ousted as vice premier on December 13, be returned to "some capacity" in the Vichy regime.

Laval Insistent

The message, it was stated, does not insist that Laval be restored to his December 13 status as vice premier, foreign minister and "political heir" of the 84-year-old Petain but leaves this matter to negotiations among Laval, Petain and Admiral Darlan, the new No. 2 man of Vichy who replaced Laval.

It was uncertain how far the new negotiations can progress because Laval hitherto has flatly refused to collaborate with Darlan and has insisted that he must be returned to Vichy as premier with full direction of foreign and home affairs and the title of chief of the government.

This title of chief of government now is held by Petain.

Laval also insisted that he be given the right to name his own cabinet, responsible to him alone, and therefore achieve a role of virtual dictator over France.

There is no indication as to when the new negotiations will start, but

King Exhorts Greece to Fight 'To Very End'

George Sets Up New Cabinet After Two Other Leaders Fail

By the Associated Press

Athens, April 20.—King George II in the dual role of monarch and premier called upon all Greeks tonight to defend their nation "to the very end" as British and Greek troops fell back before the massed charges of German blitzmen.

Just after completing a streamlined cabinet, the King-premier in a broadcast message appealed "to the Greek people, to all who are fighting at the front, as well as to all who are contributing to the war efforts behind the lines, to remain united and steadfast, to carry on the fight for the country's honor and independence."

Olympus Abandoned

The King indicated he would continue in his twin capacity only temporarily and urged all Hellenes to help perform their "supreme duty to the country."

"God save Greece," he said in conclusion.

The British abandoned Mount Olympus to the Germans in a retreat covered by heavy rearguard fighting. To the west, the Greeks also were reported falling back.

Informed British military sources acknowledged that the situation was "serious," but declared that the Allied forces were retreating in orderly fashion and maintaining an unbroken line.

The British said all arms were brought into action. The Germans were giving the heaviest possible air support to their armored units charging British and Greek lines.

Cabinet Cut in Half

Athens itself had seven brief air alarms during the day, but no bombs were dropped in the immediate Athens area. One large formation of German bombers was sighted near the city.

King George entrusted the posts of vice premier and minister of

Servant Accused Of Grand Larceny; Man Also Is Held

Baroness Madeline Stackelberg, American-born wife of Baron Stackelberg of Estonia and one of Capital society's most beautiful members, yesterday had cause to thank the District police force. After several months' search it had recovered a $1,000 diamond-studded pin she reported lost on January 19.

They reported they had under arrest a maid of the baroness and an accomplice who was apprehended in Baltimore as he attempted, police said, to pawn a pin which turned out to be the one belonging to the baroness. The maid, Elsie Johnson 24, of 1008 O Street Northwest, is charged with grand larceny and the man, Arthur B. Walker, 22, 1017 P Street Northwest, is charged with receiving stolen property. They will receive a preliminary hearing today in Police Court.

On January 19 she attended a concert at Constitution Hall and on returning home discovered that one of two diamond pins she wore was missing. The maid, police said, joined in a search for it.

Detective Sergts. Thomas J. Sullivan, D. C. Fletcher and Norman S. Hodkinson were assigned to the case. The maid, police said, told them she found the pin in a gutter in front of the Vogel home and turned it over to Walker.

The pin is of platinum and studded with 34 diamonds. The baroness told police the pins were purchased in London.

War Lords Felicitate Hitler On Birthday at Balkan Front

Berlin, April 20 (AP).—Adolf Hitler celebrated his fifty-second birthday in a festooned railway dining car surrounded by his military leaders somewhere on the Balkan front behind his advancing troops.

The Fuehrer spent part of his celebration, described as marked by "soldierly simplicity," poring over military maps and receiving felicitations of his army, navy and air force chieftains. Radio announcers at the scene said he responded to each of the greetings with a word of thanks and a handshake.

His special train was parked on a siding in a valley near a station, the broadcasters said, with German anti-aircraft units visible on nearby mountain tops.

In Berlin the only outward sign was the presence of thousands of swastikas waving from windows. The United States Embassy participated to the extent of displaying its national colors in keeping with international courtesy.

Leland Morris, United States Charge d'Affaires, called at the Reich's chancellery and entered his name in the diplomats' book of birthday greetings to Hitler.

Hitler's private celebration began last midnight when members of his staff assembled in his dining car.

Gen. Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command of the armed forces, started the round of felicitations. He termed the last year as one of "big and gigantic successes" and added that

Knox and Donovan Help in Rescue Of Five in Potomac

Five exhausted swimmers, three men and two girls, struggling in the choppy Potomac off Fort Washington, were rescued yesterday by the crew and passengers of the U. S. S. Milan, Navy cutter assigned to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph Bard.

Secretary Knox, Assistant Secretary Bard and Col. William J. Donovan, who recently returned from a European mission for the President, participated in the rescue.

The plight of the swimmers was revealed by a girl aboard an anchored cabin cruiser, who waved frantically at the Milan and succeeded in signaling that her five companions were unable to swim back to the motorboat or to the shore, 1,000 feet away.

The swimmers were hauled aboard. Two were returned to the cabin cruiser; the other three were put ashore at Fort Washington, because of their poor condition.

Wavell Plans Counterattack In Africa

By the United Press

Cairo, April 20.—Britain's Army of the Nile is preparing to strike back "when the moment is ripe" in a strong counteroffensive against the German and Italian armored divisions whose steel spearhead has been thrust into Egypt, informed British quarters said tonight.

His North African forces swelling with constant arrivals of more men and equipment, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell was said to have completed a plan for stemming the Axis drive toward the Suez Canal and there is now "quiet confidence" in the situation among the British high command.

British official communiques today told of heavy attacks by squadrons of British planes upon the Axis desert lines of communications, ports, airdromes and columns which the R. A. F. has been blasting night and day in conjunction with British warships.

The defenders of Tobruk, 80 miles behind the Salum spearhead of the Axis drive, have beaten off another German tank assault upon their outer ring of defenses, the Middle East command's communique said.

Nazis Lose Four Tanks

"Twelve German tanks penetrated the outer defenses but were driven off after four of the tanks were knocked out," it was stated.

Around Salum, British mobile patrols were said to have dashed out and inflicted "serious losses" on the enemy, taking prisoners.

Informed quarters, expanding on today's communique, said that no great material changes had occurred on the Libyan front in the past 48 hours and revealed that a mechanized force of Indian troops was engaged in battle with the Axis "panzer" units at Tobruk after fighting around the Jebel Akdar range to the west.

British Advance

Moving swiftly to complete the conquest of Italian East Africa, British forces advancing upon Dessie, one of the last strongholds of Fascist resistance, were said officially to be in "close contact" with Italian forces holding positions just outside the city.

In the Dessie fighting 200 prisoners have been taken, it was said, while in southern Ethiopia Italian forces are being driven in swift retreat by Ethiopian patriot tribesmen.

Heavy British bombing attacks on the harbors of Bengasi and Tripoli, on the night of Friday and early Saturday were described in an R. A. F. communique.

More than 15 tons of bombs crashed upon Tripoli, hitting ships, moles and quays, and at Bengasi various parts of the harbor were bombed.

British bombers and fighters, the R. A. F. said, are inflicting heavy casualties and damage on Axis troops, panzer columns and materials all the way across Libya to Tripoli.

In East Africa, the R. A. F. said, its planes bombed and machine-gunned Italian positions and motor transport in the Dessie-Alomata area.

Nazis Blast Italians Fleeing Tobruk Battle

By Jan Yindrich

Copyright by United Press

With the British garrison besieged at Tobruk, April 17 (via Cairo and London; delayed).—German tanks today opened fire on about 1,000 Italian infantrymen when the Fascist troops turned and fled from an attack on this desert stronghold under a blasting of British artillery.

(Yindrich's dispatch did not reveal whether the German tanks had purposely turned their guns on the Italian troops or whether the Fascisti, scattering in disorder, had been caught in the line of the German fire.)

The tank and infantry attack occurred in a lashing sandstorm that reduced visibility to about 20 yards. The German tanks would suddenly loom up like ghostly monsters out of the storm before the British defenders.

After the melee, a patrol of Australians with three mobile Bren gun carriers darted out in an encircling attack and seized 847 Italian prisoners including a German officer, an Italian colonel and more than 20 other officers.

The sun-bronzed defenders of Tobruk who have stood up against a battering ram of German and Italian tanks and waves of infantry assaults for six days have made this desert siege a costly one for the Axis.

In those six days of constant struggle beneath a searing African sun the British imperial forces have destroyed 33 German and Italian tanks, some of them big monsters, taken 1,500 prisoners and piled the sands outside Tobruk's ring of defenses with dead and dying German and Italian soldiers.

The Germans and Italians today launched their seventh big attack on Tobruk, only to be hurled back again.

After breaking through the wire barricades of Tobruk's outer defenses tanks cruised about inside the wire, shooting at British defense posts.

Lone Aussie Stops One

Three of the tanks were knocked out by antitank fire and a fourth was stopped by an Australian who crawled up to the tank's blind side and, sticking a piece of angle-iron in the caterpillar treads, brought it to a halt.

The rest of the German tanks turned back, harried by the fire of British tanks which struck out in pursuit.

Infantry following behind the German tanks had come to within 800 yards of the outer British wire but dispersed and withdrew when fired on by British artillery.

During the previous night about 1,000 Italian infantrymen had been seen moving into positions outside the wire in preparation for the attack.

The British guns went into action and threw the Italians back, whereupon the German tanks fired on the retreating Italians.

The German infantry men in this desert war spurn the use of steel helmets and those taken prisoner have explained that the beating sun makes the insides of the helmets like a furnace.

now under Hitler's leadership "we are chasing the fleeing British from the European continent."

Then Hitler raised his glass "and with the gentlemen of his staff toasted to victory," D. N. B., the German official news agency, reported. After joining the party for an hour and a half, D. N. B. said he received the latest reports from the front and withdrew.

In a broadcast today from the special train Reichsmarshal Goering tendered the best wishes of the armed forces to Hitler and told him "we will beat the enemy wherever we encounter him."

"Today," Goering asserted, "it is the fervid desire of the German soldier, and his solemn pledge, to be victor wherever you, my Fuehrer, command. And I know this termination and conviction will bring us the greatest of all victories."

Deputy Nazi Leader Rudolf Hess told Hitler that "your spirit and your will brought a new people and a new soldier to protect them . . . trust in you is unlimited. God protect our Fuehrer."

Others present included Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop; Heinrich Himmler, chief of all German police; Admiral Erich Raeder, chief of the naval forces, and Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchtisch, commander in chief of the German army.

The broadcast of the celebration aboard the train began 10 a. m. and promptly at 2 p. m. Hitler and his staff resumed a conference interrupted for the broadcast.

In the morning, Hitler reviewed honor troops among the hundreds of soldiers surrounding the train, listened to a band concert and chatted on a wooden patform with members of his staff.

Daily military communiques have been transmitted from a press car attached to the train. A nine-man staff is under supervision of the Reich's press chief, Otto Dietrich.

Furthermore, the Germans opened to their panzer divisions a broad easy sweep of the Thessalonian plains extending about 50 miles southwest to the Oris Othrys mountain range.

A. D. N. B., German official news agency, dispatch, said the British withdrawing from Larisa were trying to move columns of soldiers and streams of motorized equipment three abreast on the road to Lamia, a rail and highway junction 50 miles to the south.

Terrific traffic jams resulted, D. N. B. reported, giving German dive-bombers and pursuit planes easy targets. English losses were heavy and increasing hourly, the agency said.

Stukas Play Big Part

Informed Germans said many Greek divisions were retreating in confusion without unified leadership. At Kastoria alone they asserted Greeks belonging to 11 divisions were among prisoners taken.

Stukas played a big part in the capture of both Trikkala and Larisa, the high command said, declaring that they dealt heavy punishment to the Allied positions then pounced repeatedly upon the retreating forces. Ten British planes were declared destroyed on the ground and one in the air.

On the western flank of the Allied front the high command asserted that the Allies were falling back steadily before the Italians west of the Pindus Mountains while to the east it said "many Greek soldiers and entire units surrendered to the advancing Germans."

In northern Yugoslavia, the war bulletin listed 1,500 officers and 244,000 prisoners thus far counted among the disbanded and routed Yugoslav army.

Fierce Raid on London

These accounts of Axis successes were coupled with an announcement that 100,000 fire bombs and 1,000 high explosives were dumped overnight upon London by hundreds of planes in a raid "not secondary in force and effectiveness" to the Luftwaffe's last big attack on April 16.

The high command described the raid on London as in retaliation for the big R. A. F. raid on Berlin the night of April 18. It said fires visible for miles were started in the Thames bend, the Millwall docks and the Greenwich area.

The communique added that planes destroyed two British merchantmen totaling 6,000 tons yesterday on the Scottish east coast and set afire oil tanks on the Mediterranean island of Malta.

Supplementing this account, authorized sources said an Allied merchantman of 8,000 tons was sunk by air bombs in Greek waters yesterday and that two other vessels, presumably transports, aggregating 13,000 tons were damaged heavily.

British land forces in North Africa, supported by the British fleet and the R. A. F., are making unsuccessful assaults on Axis forces at Salum, just inside the Egyptian border, the high command said.

Day and night air assaults were said to have been made on the British at Tobruk, 80 miles west of the border, and big fires and explosions touched off.

Army to View Trackless Tank

A new type of "trackless tank" which may be adaptable for reconnaissance purposes is to be demonstrated to the Army at Fort Myer, Va., today.

Specific details as to how the machine operates were not disclosed by the War Department, but it said present tentative plans call for a redesign of the tank's superstructure to add suitable armanent.

The Trackless Tank Corporation of New York submitted the vehicles to the Army Ordnance Bureau for inspecting some time ago.

marines to a veteran naval career man, Admiral Alexander Sakellariou, after two other leaders failed to form a cabinet.

The cabinet was cut from 21 ministers to 10. It included seven new members but did not change the political nature of the cabinet of the late Premier Gen. John Metaxas, which had served since the start of the war against Italy had October.

The foreign affairs and finance posts were given to Emmanuel Tsouderos, a former governor of the Bank of Greece and finance minister in 1924. He also was made minister of national economy provisionally.

The Greek high command reported that two Axis attacks in Albania on the Greeks were "repelled with heavy losses" and added the enemy was "chased beyond his original positions."

The high command also noted great activity of enemy aviation in Macedonia and Thessaly, where the Germans are pressing the Allies.

The ministry of home security reported that dive-bomber raids on Piraeus, port of Athens, and the Elevsis and Megara regions caused damage and casualties but cost the Germans five bombers. Other sections of Greece also were attacked by Italian and German raiders.

The Greek press ministry in a radio bulletin declared that "all violent efforts by the enemy to force a decisive and immediate issue have failed" and that German losses are "enormous."

The ministry reported the Germans "attempted at all costs to force passes" in the Kalabaka area but they "failed and paid dearly for the failure in casualties."

The Germans also sacrificed soldiers "by the thousands" in the Olympus area, the ministry said.

Mount Olympus, where the British have told of piling up German dead with murderous fire down its shell-blackened slopes, was abandoned by the British and imperial troops before it was taken by the Germans, British sources declared.

The Germans continued to hurl masses of troops into battle regardless of cost, the British said. But in spite of the fighting, the retirement was said to be proceeding according to plan.

"By able handling and determined fighting, the rearguards have succeeded in delaying the German advance and have inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy," a British communique said.

"Where the new Allied line would be formed was not told in British or Greek reports.)

The R. A. F. is playing a major role in the battle. Its command reported that fighter patrols intercepted German dive bombers escorted by Nazis fighter when they attempted attacks on allied forces and shot down, without a single loss, ten German planes and seriously damaged "many others."

King George, striving almost without rest to organize a cabinet, held uninterrupted conferences with generals and political leaders throughout the day until the half military, half civilian cabinet was announced.

The new cabinet went to work immediately, holding its first meeting as soon as oaths had been taken before the King.

In the new line-up, several ministers hold more than one portfolio.

Political observers regarded it as significant that three holdovers from the cabinet of Premier Alexandros Korizis all have additional duties.

Costas Maniadakis, already minister of home security, also became minister of the interior; Theologos Nicoloudis combined the press post with public welfare, and Labor Minister Aristides Demetratos took on the additional duties of the agriculture and cooperatives ministries.

The complete list of the new ministers:

Premier—King George II.

Air—Gen. P. Nicolaides.

Communications and provisional railways—Gen. G. Kordzas.

Foreign finance and provisionally national economy—Emmanuel Tsouderos.

Press and public welfare—Theologos Nicouloudis.

Agriculture, labor and cooperatives—Aristides Demetratos.

Interior and home security—Costas Maniadakis.

Mercantile marine—Stavros Theophanides.

The cabinet crisis was precipitated Friday by the suicide of Premier Korizis because, it was said officially, of his anguish over Greece's "unequal struggle" against the armies of Germany and Italy.

Two leaders, Kostas Kotzias, former military governor of Athens, and Gen. Alexander Mazarakis, former war minister, were asked to form a cabinet but failed to solve the crisis. Then Admiral Sakellariou was entrusted with the task.

Admiral Sakellariou, 54, was commander in chief of the navy from 1933 to 1936 and chief of the naval general staff since 1937.

He took part in the Balkan campaign against Turkey and Bulgaria in 1912 and 1913 and in the war against Turkey in 1920-1922.

some Hungarians declared he was running the risk of being crushed between the millstones of the Iron Guard and the Axis powers.

Inflammatory leaflets strongly reminiscent of former Iron Guard writings are being distributed by the thousands, Hungarian reports said.

Antonescu, who last week threatened immediate execution for terrorists after uncovering a plot to assassinate him, published a decree last night requiring all printers to register with police every page printed by them. A five-year prison sentence was threatened for failure to comply.

The Rumanian press declared sharply that Antonescu could not invalidate by armed force the Axis Vienna arbitration of last year, which handed part of Transylvania to Hungary.

Budapest's complete blackout, introduced when the Balkan War started, ended tonight.

All war prisoners born on former Yugoslav territory now held by Hungary have been sent home by German military authorities. Between 7,000 and 8,000 already have gone.

Croat prisoners held by the Hungarian army are being returned to Croatia in closed train units.

Troops Reach Greek Frontier, Italy Claims

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 20.—The Italian high command claimed today a sweeping Fascist advance had carried divisions of the Ninth and Eleventh armies to the Albanian-Greek frontier.

"Numerous fighting, bombing and dive-bombing planes, altogether 450 of them, carried out intense and continuous actions against the retreating Greek army," the high command added. It said "hundreds of truck loads of troops and materials" were destroyed.

The communique said the Greek rear guard had put up a stiff fight and that the roads were full of obstacles, but that in spite of these handicaps the Italians moved steadily ahead.

"Numerous prisoners and large quantities of arms and materials were captured," it said.

The communique did not say whether the attacking planes were Italian or German or both, but it declared troop concentrations, barracks and artillery positions were all showered with machinegun and bomb fire.

Five planes were destroyed in a low flying attack on Katsike airport near Ioannina, Greece, the communique said, and added that the Preveza naval base was bombed.

German air corps squadrons bombed the Micabba airport at Malta, it continued, and "port works were hit and one large steamer damaged."

The high command also claimed that an Italian submarine torpedoed "an enemy destroyer" in the Eastern Mediterranean.

It acknowledged a British air raid on Bengasi and Tripoli but said there was no appreciable damage done.

Speed Expected on Bills to Take Over Alien Ships

Reports that Germany has been requisitioning French ships were described here yesterday as likely to hasten Congressional action on President Roosevelt's request for authority to take over idle foreign ships in United States ports.

Chairman Schuyler Otis Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, said yesterday that the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee would resume hearings on the ship requisitioning bill at an executive session tomorrow at that time. He said the committee expects to hear from Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, and representatives of the State and other departments.

The committee has before it not only the Administration bill, sponsored by Chairman Bland, but a proposal previously introduced by Representative James C. Oliver (Republican), of Maine, which sought to facilitate acquisition of the immobilized foreign ships through voluntary purchase or charter.

Nazis Strafe 2 Scottish Cities; Brest Raided

By the Associated Press

London, April 20.—German daylight raiders strafed two Scottish towns today, while in London rescue squads worked from dawn to dusk lifting out numerous dead and injured left by Saturday night's large scale luftwaffe assault.

Other Nazi formations, soaring through cloudless Channel skies, also attacked the southeast coast, where the sound of machine gun fire and cannons of diving planes was heard. One raider was reported intercepted and shot down into the Channel.

London sirens sounded an alert just before midnight, but the "raiders passed" signal followed quickly.

The R. A. F. struck back with daylight raids on German shipping in the Channel and against Brest and other targets on the Nazi-held French coast. One Nazi plane was destroyed and another was seen diving out of control, the air ministry announced, adding that the foray cost the R. A. F. one plane.

Dover Coast Shelled

The sole fatality of the German raids in Scotland, a 3-year-old boy, was killed by machine-gun bullets sprayed in a garden by a plane which returned to unload bombs in the same place. Ten were injured in the other Scottish town.

German "Big Berthas" on the French coast fired across Dover Straits for a brief interval this morning caused no casualties.

The government acknowledged many casualties and heavy damage was inflicted here in the overnight raid, which was almost as bad as Wednesday night's worst attack of the war on the capital.

Rescue squads with cranes and pneumatic drills worked all day and into the night freeing those trapped and clearing away wreckage.

The people took stoically this reopening of the battle of London and once more there was raised the demand to "give it back to Berlin."

"Until We Give Them Hell"

To these demands Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio, responded in a speech today after reminding his audience that it was Adolf Hitler's birthday:

"I hope that tonight this country will take the most appropriate methods I can think of, of giving him the sort of birthday present we all feel sure he ought to have after last night's raid on London."

Speaking in the same vein, Solicitor General Sir William Jowitt told a Kent audience that he seconded the British threat to bomb Rome, adding, "and I am delighted to see also a statement that we are going to bomb Berlin systematically and methodically and with better bombs until we have given them what I call Hell."

The weight of last night's hours-long attack fell heavily upon working class residential areas and modest families could be seen today loading their salvaged belongings on handcarts and pony shays and heading for makeshift homes.

Couple Wed in Ruins

Two smiling couples were married in the smoking ruins of a church where firemen still were moving about with their leaders.

A 70-year-old man dragged from the debris of his home piped:

"Give us a pint of beer, mates."

A badly jolted beer house carried on with this sign:

"This blasted pub is open."

From one of the hardest hit places 60 persons were brought out alive today. Two fire department sub stations got direct hits and some firemen were buried.

In one crowded pub some persons were blown into a cellar by a direct hit and escaped with their lives. A neaby garage was turned into a morgue for those who did not.

The air ministry announced that British bombers in their own offensive yesterday sank a 5,000-ton Axis supply ship and damaged another of 7,000 tons off the Netherlands coast.

Churchill Stands Behind Eden Amid Criticism Over Greece

By Carey Longmire

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, April 20.—While some London newspapers accepted the coming British evacuation of Greece as a strong likelihood, Prime Minister Churchill today apparently was standing squarely behind his foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, despite the outspoken criticism of Eden in some quarters for what was asserted to be his responsibility for the desperate British position in the Middle East.

It was reported that Churchill had given a strong "No" to the demand for a full House of Commons debate on the war situation in Greece and Africa, pointing out that now, while the military situation is still tense, is no time for the public airing of acrimonious charges and countercharges.

With Parliament still in its Easter recess, it could not yet be known whether that decision might be altered. It was generally understood, however, that the prime minister would make a personal statement to Commons setting forth the reasons for Britain's act in sending most of her African army to Greece to try to stem the advancing Axis tide. By so doing he would align himself strongly against Eden's critics, who complained that the denuding of Libya was an error of judgment.

The Daily Mail outcry Thursday against Eden and Gen. Sir John Dill implied that they had overruled Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, Middle East commander, and forced him to weaken his force in Africa greatly in order to send troops to Greece, thus making a gap which permitted the German advance into Egypt and the consequent threat to Suez.

This paper tomorrow will laud the British Expeditionary Force and the Greeks for "fighting one of the world's greatest defensive battles," but will say:

"What it comes to now is that we must decide to evacuate when the Greeks think the right moment has arrived. Such a moment appears to be almost inevitable . . . We can only pray that evacuation, when it comes, will be successfully accomplished."

The paper notes that the present situation in North Africa is "not unfavorable" and praises the sending of British forces to Iraq to guard the oil wells of Mosul.

Ulster Declared A Defense Area

Belfast (Monday), April 21.—Nine districts covering Northern Ireland have been declared defense areas.

Belfast, Northern Ireland's capital and part of the United Kingdom, was hard hit by a four-hour German raid Tuesday night. Many persons were killed by a direct hit on a shelter.

Thyssen Died In Prison Camp, London Paper Says

London (Monday), April 21 (INS).—The London Times today printed a report indirectly from Munich that Fritz Thyssen, noted German industrialist, had died suddenly in a German concentration camp.

Thyssen, one of Germany's wealthiest men, and an original financial backer of Adolf Hitler, fell into disfavor by opposing Germany's course that led to conflict with Britain.

He fled the Reich and was caught in France by the invasion.

Axis to Partition Yugoslavia

Yugoslavia, in the form in which the Versailles Treaty created it, was expected to be wiped off the map as a result of the current conference in Vienna. It was believed possible Italy may acquire a major portion, if not all, of the Dalmatian coast, while Germany may obtain a small strip of territory in the north where substantial German minorities dwell.

Hungary is expected to be awarded the Backa region in northeast Yugoslavia which has already been occupied by Hungarian troops. Bulgaria also has occupied the Yugoslav east Macedonian area taken from the Bulgarians after the first World War. This territory is expected to be awarded to Bulgaria. Rumanian, too, may be granted Yugoslav territory in the northeast.

Only a small Serbian state is expected to emerge from the Vienna talks and that will doubtlessly be a German "protectorate" until the end of the present war.

Naval Chief Chides Critics Of Greek War

By the Associated Press

London, April 20.—First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander lashed out at "armchair critics" of Britain's decision to send troops to Greece today, and declared to his London audience that the tonnage of Italian transports destroyed by the navy ran into "six figures."

"There are some who can be wise after events and who criticise strategy and military dispositions," he said. "I ask them to realize the vast change in the situation since last June when France collapsed and the Assassin Mussolini entered into the war thinking he was going to get something cheap.

"There were many people then who doubted our ability to last many weeks."

Enumerates Victories

Alexander enumerated Britain's African victories and said:

"It seems wrong in the circumstances for an armchair critic to tell us we ought not to have risked our position in Lybia to go to the aid of Greece. I do not think the government has any need to apologize for its decision."

He said Britain's burden in the Battle of the Atlantic was "grievous and heavy" but predicted an increasing toll of German submarines and long range planes.

He declared Britain would have to go on struggling "to get back to something like the escort position we had in the last war when we worked not only as a single fleet but had five powerful Allied fleets and five times the number of destroyers we have now."

"The amazing thing," he said, "is that the navy has kept the lifeline open."

"Wolf of Atlantic" Captured

The First Lord said one of Germany's best submarine commanders, Schepe, was dead and that Commander Otto Kretschmer, credited last December with having sunk more than 250,000 tons of shipping, was a British prisoner.

Kretschmer, Alexander continued, was "idolized in Germany as the Wolf of the Atlantic."

Solicitor General Sir William Jowitt said Britain "could not lose the war in Greece, at the Suez Canal or in the oil fields of Mosul," but could lose if "Britain is successfully invaded or starved out."

Hitler is expending about twice the quantity of oil he is getting and "as to machines, once the American supplies become effective, if it gets here, it will be conclusive," he said.

Reinstate Laval, Hitler Asks Vichy

It was believed that Darlan will return soon to Paris to confer with Hitler's personal envoy, Otto Abetz.

Hitler's latest message, it was understood, contains no time limit for the resumption of negotiations on the basis of the plan worked out by Laval, Abetz and German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, which would have been signed on December 22 if Laval had not been thrown out of power, precipitating the German-French crisis.

This plan, on the basis of which new negotiations are foreseen, call for:

1. The start of negotiations on a permanent peace replacing the French-German armistice accord.

2. Germany to recognize the integrity of the French Empire except former German colonies, and both Spain and Italy will waive all claims against France's African possessions.

3. A reduction in the daily cost of maintaining the German army of occupation in France, levied against the French people, from 400,000,000 to 196,000,000 francs a day.

4. The release from German prison camps of about 500,000 French soldiers who are needed to work on farms.

Relaxation of Boundary

5. Relaxation of the boundary control between Nazi-held and unoccupied France.

6. An exchange of food and raw material surpluses to help overcome France's famine and drive toward industrial recovery.

7—A return to French administration of the two northern departments of Nord and Pas de Calais which, since the armistice, have been under the administration of the German military command in Brussels.

8—A partial readjustment of the frontiers of Alsace and Lorraine so that France will not entirely lose her eastern provinces.

Won't Yield Fleet

Germany's concessions, it was understood, will provide for an alteration of the present French-German economic and industrial plan whereby French factories will turn out nonmilitary products with which Germany is bartering in European markets for foodstuffs, minerals and oil.

allow the Soviet to concentrate her interest on European events, particularly in the Balkans, and on guarding the Ukraine.

The Japanese troop movements may be along routes indicating they are not heading toward North China, but for Dairen or other Japanese-controlled ports in Manchukuo and Korea, where they could be embarked for a movement toward Singapore or Indo-China.

Matsuoka Reaches Border

The Japanese army in Manchukuo however, is generally estimated at not more than 400,000, and a large part of it would be required for normal garrison duty in the large territory.

Nichi Nichi's statement on trans-Siberian travel was contained in a dispatch from Manchuli, on the Manchukuo-Siberian border where Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka arrived today from his historic tour of Axis capitals and Moscow.

In a broadcast, Matsuoka urged the Japanese people to "stand firm" in the same way the German and Italian peoples are standing in Europe, and said "all official and civilian quarters in Germany and Italy reveal their determination to share the lot of the Japanese and Manchukuoan peoples. I wish Japanese and Manchukuoans would clearly recognize that."

Appearing jovial and confident, he declared the pact would be beneficial both to Japan and Russia, and that the opposition of some newspapers of other powers was "rather childish."

Treated Well in Moscow

Praising the "really warmhearted treatment given me" in Moscow, he said he had gained the impression that "remarkable advance" had been made in domestic conditions in the Soviet since his last passage through the country eight years ago.

"In short, the Soviet, to say nothing of Germany and Italy, is making full preparedness with a firm resolution to combat the unprecedentedly aggravated world situation," he said.

In an interview he said the pact was "outside my fondest expectations" and a "complete surprise."

Along with stories on Matsuoka's return, Domei, Japanese news agency, reported from Manila that United States Army authorities had advanced the deadline for evacuation of Army dependents from July 15 to May 15.

The dispatch said special arrangements were being made to speed the removal of women and children of Army men.

A tempering influence against alarmist agitation, such as the press comment on Russia possibly joining Japan, Germany and Italy in war against the United States, Britain and China was the recent denial by Koh Ishii, director of the government board of information, of rumors that Japan intends aggressive military or naval action against Singapore.

This statement, observers say, has been repeated word for word by Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, home minister, indicating its source must have been from high in the cabinet.

Meanwhile the effect of the new Japanese-Russian pact on the affair in China still is not clear.

The treaty of nonaggression between the Soviet and China in 1937 says that in event either is the object of aggression the other will not render assistance of any kind, either directly or indirectly, to the third power or powers during the "entire" conflict.

The agreement also binds the two powers "to refrain from taking any action, or entering into any agreement which may be used by an aggressor or aggressors to the disadvantage of the party subjected to aggression."

Second U. S. Bomber Flies From Manila

Manila, P. I., April 20 (AP).—Reliable quarters said today that a second American-made bomber manned by a British crew hopped off Saturday, supposedly for Singapore.

Two American-built bombers arrived April 6. One left two days ago for an unannounced destination, presumably Singapore.

U.S. Navy Soon Will Top All, Editor Predicts

San Francisco, April 20 (INS).—Japan's navy numerically is greater than the United States Navy, but the American Navy will surpass any navy in the world within a short time.

The United States, backed by vast natural resources and an incredible genius for production, can outbuild a combination of the strongest world powers, whether it be ships, planes, automobiles or weapons of war.

These views were expressed in San Francisco tonight by Richard Hughes, editor in chief of Australia's Consolidated Press Service and a distinguished authority on the Far East.

The Australian editor, just beginning a tour of the United States to find out for himself "how Americans feel about Australia and the war," said he had never seen or expects to witness again a demonstration to equal the one occasioned by the visit of United States cruisers and destroyers to Sydney last month.

"The exceptional enthusiasm shown then," he said, "'was a manifestation of the strong bond of friendship existing between Australia and the United States."

Has Interviewed Statesmen

Hughes, who has interviewed virtually every important Japanese statesman within and outside the military forces, declared that although Japan's navy is at present numerically stronger in capital ships than the United States Navy, the Nipponese navy high command seeks no fight with the American fleet.

"The average Japanese navy officer," he said, "is a well traveled and well educated man of the 'warrior-gentleman' type. He realizes the tremendous responsibility of provoking a fight not necessarily with the American Navy, but with any other power.

Japanese Confused

"Many Japanese navy officers have told me they see no reason why America and Japan should engage in armed conflict. Their attitude is one of confusion in regarding such a tragic possibility but they say 'if we must fight the United States Navy we will do our very best.' And make no mistake about it, the Japanese naval command salutes the United States fleet as a powerful adversary for any foe."

Hughes interviewed Almon P. Roth, president of the San Francisco Employers' Council, and Harry Bridges, Australian-born Longshoremen's Union president, as soon as he arrived in San Francisco.

"Australians are tremendously interested in the Bridges case," Hughes explained. "Harry Bridges was never known there, however, until he rose in the ranks of American labor.

"This present deportation hearing for Bridges is rather curious in one aspect," he added. "If the United States Government proves Bridges was or is an out-and-out member of the Communist Party, Australia will not take him back. We have passed a rigid law banning Communists and the Communist Party."

As for the word "Communist," Hughes said he was of the opinion that employers misuse it just as unionists misuse the words "Fascist" and "Nazi."

Nazis to Ration Supplies of Fish To Norwegians

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, April 20.—For the first time in history all Norwegian fishing industries will be placed under governmental control tomorrow.

The official reason given for this measure is that government control will help to survey the rationing of fish, which means that fish will be rationed. Until now fish was one of the few unrationed commodities that Norwegians could buy and the extreme shortage of all other roodstuffs made it more than ever the staple food of Norwegians.

Under the new regulations, it will be forbidden to sell salted fish or to make dried fish without special permission, and it is also declared that greater quantities of fish than ever will be transformed into fish oils which can, as it well known, be used for the production of explosives.

Another report says that the Spitzbergen Coal Mines Co. changed owners and that a new company controlled by the Germans has been created. Work in the mines, says this report, will be rationalized and gigantic icebreakers which will be built will enable the exploitation of the mines during the entire summer and winter.

Serb Guerrilla Bands Take Toll of Nazis

Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, April 20.—Komitadji resistance in Yugoslavia is continuing, according to a report received here today from a neutral diplomat "somewhere in Serbia."

Despite German and Italian threats that overt acts will be tried by drumhead courts-martial, snipers are still taking a heavy toll of isolated German patrols.

In the region north west of Skoplje an armed band estimated at some 8,000 men is fighting its way toward the south, apparently in a blind endeavor to reach the Greek lines and continue the battle. It is reported that 111 of these were captured early yesterday and were summarily executed in the public square of the town in which they were caught.

On other "fronts" resistance is also rapidly organizing with guerrilla bands laying land mines and decoying the invaders into crossing them with resultant severe losses in killed and wounded.

Some details of the last five days of fighting have also become available. It would appear that in the Kachanik offensive the Germans lost in the five days preceding the "armistice" 182 tanks destroyed and 41 damaged, and suffered about 9,500 killed and 19,000 wounded. Eighteen stukas were downed in operations over that area by the ground defenses in three days.

From other indications it would appear that the Germans, far from reducing the number of men—variously estimated at from 500,000 to 750,000—on Yugoslav soil at the end of the conflict, have been forced to increase their garrisons in such places where they could not be replaced by Hungarian or Bulgarian troops, and even these replacements are understood to be encountering difficulties.

Mystery Shrouds Surrender

An Italian source sheds a little light on the identity of the negotiators of the capitulation. According to this report, Col. Bonfatti, the military attache at the Italian Legation in Belgrade, whose retreat from Belgrade was cut off by the suddenness of the German onslaught, remained together with 59 Italians still in Belgrade in the Italian Legation's bomb shelter. When German troops arrived in the capital and "restored order," Col. Bonfatti is understood to have contacted former Foreign Minister Alexander Cincarmarkovic, with whom he opened negotiations for the "capitulation."

On the 17th, these negotiations were brought to a successful conclusion and a capitulation was drawn up which was signed by Cincar-Markovic and Gen. Jankovic (presumably the military governor of Belgrade) for the Yugoslav government, and Col. Bonfatti for Italy.

How this agreement was extended to the Germans is not explained. It was also learned that former Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic was seriously wounded during the fourth bombardment of Belgrade and is at present in a hospital in a serious condition.

Stockholm Hears of Civil Strife in Yugoslavia

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, April 20.—The Berlin correspondent of the newspaper Dagens Hyheter gives today a few details of what he calls "a miniature civil war" which raged in certain parts of Croatia, Slavonia and Dalmatia during the last days of Yugoslavia.

Among the killed, says the correspondent, was the brother of Gen. Kvaternik, who is at present one of the chiefs of the "independent Croatia." The brother of Gen. Kvaternik was killed by marines on the streets of the town of Erienitza, near Fiume, when with the help of Croatian soldiers they tried to take the town from Serbian soldiers.

The Croat troops separated from the Serbs on the night of April 7, two days after the outbreak of war.

New Zealander in Greece Tells Of Killing Waves of Germans

By the United Press

Athens, April 20.—A young New Zealand officer returning wounded to Athens from the Olympus front told how his small unit of machine-gunners and anti-tank gunners repulsed waves of attacks by German shock troops who used rubber boats and parachutists.

"We thought we had an easy post, defending a pass flanked by mountains through which a river skirted a small road," the New Zealander said. "But the Germans sent armored cars against us and we thought nothing of it until the dawn of the next day, when they launched an attack with the rubber boats which we could see only dimly in the half-light.

"We sank one boat after another, although the German armored cars were laying down a barrage of covering fire.

"After two hours the river was teeming with sunken boats and men were swimming and clutching half-sunken craft, some of which went down with dead and wounded aboard.

"After hurling a barrage of grenades, we wiped them out and continued to hold our position."

"My men got sick of the killing," the officer added . . . "It was mass slaughter. We mowed down those boats as fast as they came, with eight men aboard each one."

Unable to cross the river gorge, the Germans attacked from the west with parachute troops, the officer continued.

"Our positions appeared to be in danger until my captain drew a bead on the leader with an antitank machine gun. He was a 6-footer and he got it square in the chest, dropping down behind a rock. The others fled."

Army, Navy Seeking Officer Material on U. S. Campuses

By the Associated Press

Thousands of college seniors will be swapping their caps and gowns for officers' uniforms in the next few weeks if recruiting campaigns of the Army, Navy and Air Corps hit their marks.

All three service have been combing the campuses in quests for officer material, especially for the technical branches of the armed forces.

In a bid for engineering officers, the Navy sent Rear Admiral H. E. Yarnell, distinguished former commander of the Asiatic Fleet, on a two-months tour of colleges and universities to drum up applicants for commissions in the Naval Reserve.

Recently the War Department announced that between 00 and 1,000 college students who are graduates of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps would be sought annually for the Air Corps reserve to meet a need for officers qualified for duties in connection with supply procurement. Students who have majored in aeronautical or mechanical engineering and business administration are desired particularly.

Maj. Gen. George H. Brett told Congress recently that the Air Corps was considering mass demonstrations at colleges with the idea of stimulating interest of students in the flying service.

In addition to technically trained men, the Army also is looking for college students with leadership qualifications to furnish officers for the steadily growing infantry and other branches of the land forces.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, said the Army expected to have approximately 35,000 students in the ranks this summer from whom to draw candidates for a special officers' training course which the War Department plans to offer to about 10,000 draftees each year. The course, lasting three months, is designed to produce second lieutenants—the latest version of the production of so-called "90-day wonder" officers during the World War.

To be eligible for the short course, draftees must have six months' service in the Army, so that it would be at least nine months after their induction before they could obtain commissions in that manner.

House Committee Starts Work Today on Huge New Tax

By the Associated Press

The many ways in which the defense program will touch the national pocketbook will begin to take form today, as the House Ways and Means Committee begins hearings on roposals to raise $3,500,000,000 through heavier or new levies.

Work on the tax bill, which is intended to increase Government income during the emergency sufficiently to cover two-thirds of the annual cost of the defense and aid programs, will begin in secret session.

John L. Sullivan, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and other Administration and Congressional experts are to explain to the committee details of a wide range of plans for increasing old and levying new taxes, on which they have been working for several months. The amount to be sought was disclosed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau last week. General approval of the program has been voiced by leaders of both parties at the Capitol.

Hearings to Follow

Hearings on the new proposals will follow, with groups affected by them being given an opportunity to testify. Representative Doughton, of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, is hopeful the hearings can be completed in two weeks, though some Capitol Hill figures estimate more time will be needed.

After the hearings, the committee will face the task of writing the intricate, record-breaking tax bill.

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican House leader, suggested yesterday that in view of the magnitude and complexity of the task, it was unlikely that the committee could have the bill ready for consideration on the floor within six weeks. It is intended to apply the new rates and levies to 1941, income and business.

Income Tax Rise Likely

Some of the changes generally expected to be embodied in the new bill include:

A rise in the normal income tax from 4 per cent to 6 per cent.

Application of surtaxes to incomes of $2,000 and over instead of those of $4,000 and more as at present.

Lowering of the exemption for a married man from $2,000 to $1,800.

An increase in the corporation tax from 24 per cent to 30 per cent.

A 1-cent per gallon increase in the gasoline levy.

Increases in the excise taxes on automobiles, tobacco and alcohol and a return to World War levies on railroad tickets, soft drinks, candy, firearms, etc.

Elimination of the 10 per cent exemption on earned income.

A boost in the 10 per cent defense tax.

Lawrence Lives Again in Wilds Of Ethiopia

By H. P. Godfrey Anderson,
An English Journalist.

With the Ethiopian Army, April 12 (Delayed).—The spirit of Lawrence of Arabia lives again in the men who are leading the irregular bands of Ethiopian warriors now pressing toward Addis Ababa under the banner of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Since the slender little monarch returned to Ethiopia early in February this handful of tough Australians and East Africans have lived constantly in the field with their dusky warriors, leading them in one daring raid after another on the Italian lines of communication.

Traversing what seems to be impossible country with tough mules, plodding along precipitous mountain tracks they move around the Fascist fortified positions and install themselves far behind the lines.

And soon another big convoy of Italian trucks unsuspectingly rolls into an ambush.

I met one of these band leaders, an Australian lieutenant, as he led his men back from a raid that sent 27 Italian trucks to their doom. He looked like a figure out of the old American Wild West. A great black beard covered the lower part of his brown face. An Australian slouch hat was on his head, two guns hung from his belt and he wore cowboy chaps to protect his legs from the thorns.

His long legs hung almost to the ground from his small black mule, which carried a painted wood Ethiopian saddle.

Later in the hut where he slept we sat down on ammunition boxes to eat a meal of chicken and beans. We talked by candlelight, and as we sat there I could see through the door the dark forms of the men outside and the crouching camels.

The lieutenant said he had found his Ethiopians were excellent soldier material.

With four Australian sergeants he came to the Middle East with the first contingent of the Australian forces.

"We all volunteered as banda (native) leaders because bush-whacking suited us," he said, "and we have never regretted it."

Catholic Veterans Present Flag To St. Anthony's

An American flag, presented to St. Anthony's Parish in Brookland by the Catholic War Veterans of the District of Columbia, was raised on the church lawn yesterday in the presence of more than 700 people.

The flag, dedicated to memory of men of the parish who died in all the country's wars and in honor of young men now called to the colors, was given by National Aide Francis J. Cough, of the veterans organization. Actual presentation was by William A. Hickey, 76, oldest of the Catholic War Veterans in the United States, to the Rev. James Dwyer, acting pastor of St. Anthony's. The flag was raised by Past Commander Henry M. Hodges, of McAlexander Post, American Legion.

After an address on "Americanism and Love of the Flag," by the Rev. John N. Spence, benediction was said in the church. At the base of the pole when the flag was raised were 16 veterans in uniform and five schoolchildren of the parish in appropriate costumes: John McCarron, as a soldier; Alberta Houch, as a nun; James Finnan, priest; Jean Lloyd, Red Cross nurse, and Donald Masterson, Uncle Sam. Charles M. Griffin, of Hurney Post, Catholic War Veterans, presided.

Lacking Spring Dress, Girl Shoots Herself

New York, April 20 (AP).—Concetta Giuliano, 15, a vocational school student, could not match her friends in spring attire and that was why, Assistant District Attorney James McGrattan said, she fired a bullet into her heart today.

For weeks the girl had pleaded with her parents, who are on relief, for new Easter clothes, McGrattan said. The girl again sobbed her woes to her mother today and when she was turned down, went to her bedroom. A minute later Mrs. Giuliano heard a shot.

Hoover Again Urges Food For Europe

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, April 20.—Former President Herbert Hoover, who has pleaded unsuccessfully with the British government for relaxation of the blockade to permit sending food to small European nations, renewed that plea tonight in a Nation-wide radio talk.

Reminding Great Britain that the United States had recently passed the Lend-Lease Act—"the greatest gift ever made in the history of mankind from one nation to another"—Hoover asserted, "when the lives of millions of children and women are at stake, eternal right and humanity demand that humane America raise a voice in their behalf."

"It does not diminish our sympathies and hopes for the British cause one atom when we ask the suffering of her former Allies shall also be relieved," Hoover said. "It gives us more right to speak for the cause of these ideals and of these little nations."

Hoover, who is honorary chairman of the National Committee on Food for the Small Democracies, spoke briefly. At the close of a half-hour program sponsored over the Mutual Network by the National Student Committee on Food for the Small Democracies.

During the body of the program, student leaders of ten American universities and colleges discussed the question of sending food to Europe.

The British government has rejected the Hoover feeding plan, even on a test basis, on the ground that sending food to Nazi-held territory could not help but benefit the German war economy.

Hoover declared that under his plan the food could be sent in without giving military advantage to either side, and pointed out that the governments in exile of undernourished European nations had joined him in asking the British to let the food through.

Preceding him on the program, some of them speaking from other cities, were the following students; C. Leslie Rice, jr., of Princeton; Christine Waples, of Bryn Mawr; Ross Clinchy, of Swarthmore; James Ennis, of Georgetown; Laurie Dickson, of Johns Hopkins; Betty Gerrard South, of the University of Kentucky; Dean Walters, of Iowa State College; Mildred Eberhard, of the University of Southern California, and Leslie MacMitchell, of New York University.

Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the school of journalism at Columbia University, opened the program in New York by introducing Rice.

Roosevelt Calls for 1,000 Physicians to Serve Britain

President Roosevelt yesterday appealed through the Red Cross for 1,000 young American physicians to volunteer for service in military and civilian hospitals of "our British friends."

The British Red Cross has appealed to the American organization for aproximately that number of doctors to meet "an acute shortage" in British hospitals, the President said in a statement issued at the temporary White House at Hyde Park, N. Y.

"As president of the American Red Cross, I heartily approve this request," Mr. Roosevelt said.

His views are shared by the surgeons general of the Army, Navy and Public Health Service, he added.

Agencies Offer Aid

"I am also informed that the Division of Medical Sciences of the National Research Counsel, the American College of Surgeons and the American College of Physicians have offered their assistance to the American Red Cross in meeting this emergency," the statement read.

"The young doctors whom Great Britain so desperately needs can do much to heal the wounds inflicted alike upon civilians and military in this cruel war. Those who volunteer will be enrolled by the British Red Cross and will work under the protection of the Red Cross Treaty of Geneva, a covenant which has been respected by belligerents since 1864.

"To any American doctor who is eligible and able to go service in this cause presents a splendid opportunity."

Those volunteering will be referred by the British Red Cross to either the Royal Army Medical Corps or the civilian Emergency Medical Service, Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross said yesterday.

Won't Forfeit Citizenship

They will not be required to swear allegiance to Great Britain and in serving will not forfeit their American citizenship, Davis stated.

Dr. John R. Mote, of the American Red Cross-Harvard Hospital in England, who has just returned from London after making a survey of British medical needs, yesterday confirmed the need for physicians in the British Isles.

He declared that Britain needs doctors because of the aerial bombardment of population centers with the ensuing threat of epidemic diseases and because of the needs of troops moving rapidly over a far-flung front.

War Is Now In Grave Phase, Weygand Says

By the Associated Press

Algiers, April 20.—Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of the French forces in North Africa, expressed the belief during an interview today that the war had entered "a very grave phase" and reaffirmed his determination to defend French North Africa against any invader.

He declared also that the unity of both empire and the French motherland remains constant.

The interview took place at the winter palace. Arriving just as the sirens were sounding their first air-raid practice warning since the armistice last summer, I was ushered to the general's office, just off a blue and white tiled Moorish courtyard.

The general wore a gray business suit, blue tie and white shirt. He rose to shake hands and then motioned me to a chair in front of a big desk.

"In your opinion as one of the world's best-known military experts, has the war entered a real decisive state?" I asked him.

"That would be difficult to say," he replied. "Modern weapons offer a strong offensive method but permit also an equally persistent and prolonged defense but if the war has not reached a decisive point it has reached a very grave phase."

The conversation turned to President Roosevelt's decision to declare the Red Sea no longer a combat zone and thus permit American ships carrying war materials to go there.

Gen. Weygand agreed that this created a new situation for North Africa. Asked about the reaction of French North Africa he said:

"The word reaction involves two things: One physical, the other mental. The physical side poses the question of defense, the mental side the question of opinion. I don't know what the opinion is."

For defense Weygand has an army whose morale is "good." He repeated a declaration he had made on a previous occasion that he would use the army against any power attempting an invasion.

One of the general's responsibilities is to help unify North Africa behind France. Questioned about the results he said he felt the feeling of unity had "improved here as in France over the hesitation noticeable at the time of the armistice."

Universal Daylight Saving Favored To Aid Defense

New York, April 20 (AP).—The Merchants Association of New York said today a survey showed a rising sentiment in favor of a uniform Federal daylight saving law as a defense program measure.

Daylight saving time—one hour ahead of standard time—will be in effect in all or part of 17 States from 2 a. m. next Sunday, to 2 a. m., Sunday, September 28.

Thomas J. Miley, secretary of the association, said the association had received favorable answers to a questionnaire from over 600 municipal officials and chambers of commerce in the 48 States.

"An added hour of daylight would speed industrial production, conserve gas, coal and electricity, reduce industrial accidents and foster the health of workers in the defense program by giving them an extra hour for open air recreation," Miley said.

Hot and Cold Chemicals Noted On Distant Star

Pasadena, Calif., April 20 (AP).—Dr. Paul W. Merrill disclosed today he had discovered titanium oxide in the atmosphere of an odd and as yet unnamed star.

"It was about like finding an ice-cream brick in a furnace beside a red-hot brick," he explained.

"Titanium oxide usually is associated with low temperatures. This star's atmosphere also contains ionized helium, which is associated with high temperatures. That's why the discovery was startling."

The Mount Wilson astronomer said the star, designated "BD plus 11 degrees 4673," is too far away to be seen with the unaided eye.

Defense Speed Amazes Windsor

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., April 20.—The Duke of Windsor got a glimpse of the United States' defense preparations today and his reaction was "simply extraordinary."

He and the Duchess broke into a program of business conversations and social activity to make a half-hour inspection of the partly completed Eighth Pursuit Air Base at Morrison Field, West Palm Beach.

"It's marvelous what has been done here in such a short time," the former King of England remarked.

"I am told that the base will not be in full operation until June, but this is remarkable in itself since work was started only about the first of the year."

About 2,500 men will be stationed at the $2,000,000 base.

The royal couple visited the base after the duke held a long conference with his personal financial adviser, Sir Edward Peacock.

Neither the duke nor Sir Edward, a member of the British purchasing commission and a governor of the Bank of England, would comment on their conferences.

It was decided today to postpone the return to Nassau, where the duke is governor of the Bahama Islands, from tomorrow until Tuesday.

Plans call for the couple to make the trip in the houseboat Viator, owned by Mrs. Maitland Alexander, of Pittsburgh, if the weather is good and the sea smooth.

The social activities today included a cocktail party given by Capt. Alistair Mackintosh, long-time friend of the duke, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dillman and a dinner at the home of Herbert Pulitzer, of New York.

U. S. May Act On Soft-Coal Tie-up Today

discussel as a possibility.

At the same time, President Roosevelt expected to confer with Gov. Murray Van Wagoner, of Michigan, probably on the threatened C. I. O. strike in General Motors plants humming on production of hundreds of millions of dollars of defense materials.

The legislative branch, too, was centering its attention largely on work stoppages holding up badly needed military supplies. The special Senate committee, headed by Senator Truman, of Missouri, was scheduled today to hear Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, in its investigation of progress of the defense effort.

Facing the House is the bill by Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, to require 25 days of mediation attempts before a strike call may become effective. The measure, already approved by the Naval Affairs Committee, probably will receive House consideration Thursday.

In Senate committee is another "cooling-off" bill by Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, providing a ten-day waiting period before strike orders in defense industries may become effective.

The War Department and the National Labor Relations Board yesterday were revealed to have joined other executive departments and agencies opposing legislation restricting strike action. Senator Thomas, of Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, told the Associated Press he had received solicited letters from the two agencies, both critical of such measures as the Ball bill.

Secretary of War Stimson wrote that the War Department considered continuous operation of all available industrial facilities capable of producting defense materials "so imperative" that "interruptions caused by strikes and lockouts cannot at the present time be regarded as consistent with the public interest."

"It, nevertheless," he continued, "is loath to recommend restrictive legislation concerning labor relations as long as there is hope that other methods of preventing interruption to production will prove effective."

In another letter, the national labor relations board protested that the Ball measure would "overemphasize restriction of action on the part of employes without corresponding restrictions on the actions of employers and management."

The unusual three-sided bituminous coal controversy, with Northern owners and the union now in agreement on details of a new contract but Southern operators rejecting proposed elimination of a wage differential in their favor, complicated the problem facing the Government. Northern operators and the union rejected a suggestion by Secretary of Labor Perkins that Northern mines be reopened, leaving the dispute between the Southerners and the union to be dealt with further. Lewis has taken the stand that Northern miners will not want to return to work while their Southern members are left idle.

Possible Governmental steps discussed yesterday included a request by the President that mines be reopened pending further negotiations, to avert further shutdowns of steel plant furnaces because of the growing shortage of coke; a call by the President for a White House conference of all parties in the tie-up; a Presidential suggestion that Southern operators, who bolted the Appalachian conference, return to New York for a resumption of negotiations with the union, and certification by Secretary Perkins of the entire dispute or that side of it between the union and the Southerners, to the mediation board.

Lewis already has said he would not consent to the issues going before the board.

urgently needs.

The joint statement read as follows:

"Among other important matters, the President and the Prime Minister discussed measures by which the most prompt and effective utilization might be made of the productive facilities of North America for the purposes both of local and hemisphere defense and of the assistance which, in addition to their own programs, both Canada and the United States are rendering to Great Britain and the other democracies.

"It was agreed as a general principle that in mobilizing the resources of this continent, each country should provide the other with the defense article which it is best able to produce, and, above all, produce quickly, and that production programs should be coordinated to this end.

Expanded Productive Capacity

"While Canada has expanded its productive capacity many fold since the beginning of the war, there are still numerous defense articles which it must obtain in the United States, and purchases of this character by Canada will be even greater in the coming year than in the past.

"On the other hand, there is existing and potential capacity in Canada for the speedy production of certain kinds of munitions, strategic materials, aluminum and ships, which are urgently required by the United States, for its own purposes.

"While exact estimates cannot yet be made, it is hoped that during the next 12 months Canada can supply the United States with between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 worth of such defense articles. This sum is a small fraction of the total defense program of the United States, but many of the articles to be provided are of vital importance.

"In addition, it is of great importance to the economic and financial relations between the two countries that payments by the United States for these supplies will materially assist Canada in meeting part of the cost of Canadian defense purchases in the United States.

"Insofar as Canada's defense purchases in the United States consist of component parts to be used in equipment and munitions which Canada is producing for Great Britain, it was also agreed that Great Britain will obtain these parts under the Lease-Lend Act and forward them to Canada for inclusion in the finished article.

"The technical and financial details will be worked out as soon as possible in accordance with general principles which have been agreed upon between the President and the Prime Minister."

Canada to Get Dollars

It is obvious that the newly announced collaboration between the United States and Britain's largest dominion is the most far reaching of its kind ever made between the United States and another New World nation.

It will not only permit Canada to obtain the financing barred for a belligerent under the neutrality act, but it will provide for a practical merging, as far as the war effort is concerned, of the economies of the two nations. Since Canada will technically be obtaining money, United States dollars, in payment for materials delivered, no loan in violation of the Neutrality Act seems to be involved.

At the same time, Canada's difficulties growing out of the fact that the Dominion is still selling war materials to Britain for cash, whereas the United States is leasing or lending them, appear to be overcome.

Hopkins Takes Part in Talks

Canada has been prepared as one of the chief bases of British production for the war effort against Germany since even before hostilities commenced in September, 1939. There are, therefore, certain lines in which her war production is well ahead of that of the United States. The manner in which the joint production effort will function is well outlined in the paragraph of the statement explaining that the United States will ship unfinished products to Canada for finishing, and that Canada will thereupon transfer them to Britain without any payment by Canada being involved.

Harry L. Hopkns, supervisor of the $7,000,000,000 lease-lend fund, was at Hyde Park House today and took part in much of the conversation. He is therefore prepared to take the lead upon his arrival in Washington tomorrow in working out the details of the obviously complicated plan.

Md. Brush Fire Imperils Town

The fire in the Centreville (Va.) area covered more than 1,000 acres and threatened half a dozen homes. Fire companies from Herndon, Falls Church and Fairfax fought the fire most of the day. Michael Mohr said the blaze got within 500 feet of his home and destroyed at least $2,000 worth of oak timber on his farm.

The other Fairfax County fire near Franconia was still raging last night. Thirty-five CCC enrollees were sent out from Fort Hunt to assist firemen from five companies who were having trouble stemming the blaze because of the dry vegetation and strong wind.

The blaze near Cherrydale in Arlington County raged for three hours and destroyed an automobile belonging to a motorist who drove into the woods to get a closeup of the blaze and then got trapped. Firemen said they did not obtain his name.

About 400 firemen and CCC youths were fighting the forest blaze near Pittsville on the Eastern Shore of Maryland last night. Another fire, covering several square miles, was reported in the vicinity of Severna Park near Annapolis. Eight to ten homes were destroyed, the Associated Press reported.

In Virginia, State Forester Fred Penderson and all members of his staff were reported to be in the field directing a battle against an outbreak of fires throughout the State. An extensive blaze was said to be sweeping over hundreds of acres near Palmyra.

Several Prince Georges volunteer companies assisted in fighting a forest blaze at Glen Burnie, Md., several miles from Baltimore. The fire was reported to be under control last night after it had threatened to spread to the Baltimore city limits.

Last night extensive fires were reported to have started at Accotink Station and Carr's Crossing in Fairfax County, Va. Several volunteer companies responded.

From Charleston, W. Va., the Associated Press reported that one man was killed while fighting a forest blaze near the Braxton County Game Refuge. Two fire fighting crews were said to have been trapped and were not heard from last night in other fires. State Forester Dan B. Griffin said it was "the worst single fire day in many years."

Thousands of Acres Burned Over in 6 Months

By the Associated Press

Fires, some of which were still out of control at nightfall, blackened thousands of acres of woodland in seven States yesterday, destroyed scores of homes and caused two deaths and injuries to many.

In forests made tinder-dry by a two week's warm spell, 145 fires raged in West Virginia, 45 swept New Jersey and numerous others were reported in New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

One firefighter died in West Virginia, either burned to death or killed by a falling tree, and one man died of a heart attack while defending his home near Lakewood, in the Jersey Pine belt, where one of the day's worst fires threatened the resort town's business and main residential sections before it was checked.

The town of Widen in West Virginia was still encircled by fire at dusk.

At least 44 homes in Lakewood, N. J., many of them in the vicinity of Paul Kimball Hospital, a 45-bed institution, were destroyed. The hospital was saved.

Three thousand soldiers battled one major and two minor fires on the Fort Dix artillery range.

94-Degree Heat Sets April Record

While coming to shore, the policemen also rescued Dr. Evart Warren, 6412 Thirty-first Place Northwest, and William Fritts, 2418 Third Street Northeast, who anchored their snipe boat, High Lama, when it failed to buck the current.

A short while earlier, Dr. Warren had rescued Mrs. E. K. Morris, 5950 Hillbrook Lane Northwest, and Peter Gillard, of the Rocks Apartments. Their sailboat capsized in the Georgetown Channel.

Then the Potomac River Sailing Association said it would postpone the opening of its season because of high winds.

A tree blew down in the 500 block of A Street Northeast and blocked traffic.

Moving in on the fast southwest winds, a great cloud of dust swept over the Mall in middle afternoon, tinting the sky yellow.

Desmond H. Harris, 33, of 2913 Twenty-sixth Street Northeast, was taken from his car in the 700 block of North Capitol Street to Casualty Hospital for heat exhaustion. He received treatment and was released.

The city fire apparatus responded to 24 alarms, mostly brush fires attributed to the long dry spell. An estimated 50,000 persons packed the tree-shaded Zoo and record-breaking crowds were reported at the Lincoln Memorial, the Washington Monument and the Smithsonian Institution.

Persons going to the top of the Monument found a sudden change of temperature of about 16 degrees. Up there it was about 78.

One year ago yesterday the men wore overcoats. The maximum temperature then was 48; the minimum, 40.

The thermometer at police headquarters in Alexandria, Va., registered 90. The city's fire department responded to three brush fires.

Records Set Here

But in the District two other records for April were being set yesterday, when it had its seventh consecutive day above 80 degrees and its tenth above 70.

Traffic between Washington and Baltimore was described by motorists as the heaviest in years. Cars moved in lines two and three deep, bumper to bumper. One motorist said that 200 cars had been driven off the highway so that overheated motors might cool off, after miles of travel in first and second gear.

Woods fires that started up at mid-day yesterday near Bryantown and Leonardtown, Md., were still burning near nightfall. These were described as covering "fair-sized areas."

Three-Car Crash

Two persons were injured slightly when three cars were in collision at Browns Corner near Ednor, Md. A car operated by Andrew Miller 3d, 19, of Woodlynne, N. J., was following a car operated by Col. Wesley F. Ayer, of Fort Jay, Governors Island, N. Y., both of which were headed for Washington to see the cherry blossoms.

A car operated by William L. Lehmuth, jr., Baltimore, who had been to Washington to release homing pigeons for a race, was in collision with the other two. All three cars were badly damaged.

Andrew Miller, jr., 50, was treated for injuries to the knee and shock, and Miss June Rose, 17, of Collingwood, N. J., a passenger in the Miller car, for injuries to the nose and face at Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md. Lehmuth was charged with reckless driving.

Dr. Lovell Fills Former Pulpit As Guest Pastor

Standards of quality, rather than quantity, are needed to help solve the difficult problems of human relations today, Dr. Moses R. Lovell said yesterday at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia Road Northwest.

Guest preacher at the church he served 11 years ago, he told the congregation that the war today is in large measure the result of the failure of England, France and America to measure up to "qualitative excellence."

Dr. Lovell, now pastor of the Central Congregation Church in Brooklyn, was given a warm greeting by his former flock. When here he organized the Life Adjustment Center, now called the Mental Hygiene Clinic. He will address the Chevy Chase Community Forum tonight at 8, at the Chevy Chase Women's Club, on on "The Role of Religion in the Survival of Democracy."

New Ink to Get Trial in Charleston

Charleston, W. Va., April 20 (AP).—Auburn Taylor, 48-year-old press room foreman of the Charleston Gazette, is about ready to start a three-month trial of a water based carbon ink which he says will solve the problem of poor print on so-called "first impression" pages.

The process which Taylor will test is the simple fusion of plain water with carbon black and other elements, as contrasted to the usual formula which calls for mineral oil as a base. Taylor is not the inventor of the ink but he assisted in development and in making tests. The ink is designed to give all pages the same quality of printing.

Some Helpful Hints

FOR TELEPHONE USERS

In the rush of business, domestic and social duties, the simple little things which must be done to get the most satisfactory telephone service are sometimes forgotten. The hints given below are not new—they are just reminders:

CONSULT DIRECTORY

Memory is often faulty. Look up the number when in doubt.

LISTEN FOR DIAL TONE

If you start dialing a number before you hear the dial tone (a steady humming sound) your call cannot go through.

DIAL CAREFULLY

Dial the first two letters only of exchange name and then each digit of the number, carrying the dial around to the stop with your finger. Allow it to return naturally.

IF YOU MAKE A MISTAKE

Hang up before re-dialing. Then lift the receiver and proceed as on a new call when you hear the dial tone.

BE SLOW—BE FAST

Be slow to hang up. Give the person you're calling time to answer. A good plan is to count the rings. Ten rings equal a minute. Be fast to answer when your telephone rings. The person calling you will appreciate it.

IF YOU WOULD BE UNDERSTOOD

Keep your lips about one inch from the mouthpiece and speak directly into it, clearly and naturally. Chewing gum, pencils, cigars, pipes and cigarettes make it almost impossible for your words to flow clearly into the transmitter.

WHEN ANSWERING

Always answer pleasantly. It may be your best friend. It may be someone who will get a lasting impression of you from a first call.

PAD AND PENCIL

You'll save time and steps and have a written record of important messages if you keep a pad and pencil by the telephone.

HANG UP GENTLY AND CAREFULLY

It may annoy the person at the other end of the line if you hang up roughly. Also, if your receiver doesn't rest properly on the hook, people who call you will get a "busy" until this condition is corrected.

There's always time to use the telephone properly and to keep a smile in your voice.

St. Lawrence Plan Discussed On Air Forum

Development of the St. Lawrence Waterway is necessary for national defense on three counts, Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, said last night on the American Forum of the Air, broadcast from the Willard Hotel.

Not only is the improved waterway needed for deepwater shipping he contended, but its development would add 2,000,000 electric horsepower and would open Great Lakes shipyards to construction of badly needed ocean-going vessels. These shipyards, he said, now are idle, while those on the eastern seacoast are booked two years ahead.

In rebuttal, Robert V. Fletcher, counsel of the Association of American Railroads, pointed out that completion of the waterway is not called for until 1948, by which time its advantages probably would be too late for national defense. The project, he said, "is a serious menace to the defense program" in that its construction would require men, money and materials needed in furthering the military effort.

Their prepared talks were followed by a panel discussion in which Maurice P. Davidson, counsel of the Power Authority of New York State, and N. R. Danielian, director of the St. Lawrence Survey, took part for the project, and Representative James E. Van Zandt, of Pennsylvania, and Hale Boggs, of Louisiana, argued against the waterway.

During the panel discussion Van Zandt said a member of the Canadian Parliament told him there was disagreement over the waterway in Canada "because the people were afraid it would interfere with aid to Britain."

Berle contended that "every argument against this project was advanced against the Panama Canal" when that waterway was proposed.

Frostburg Water To Be Discussed

Frostburg, Md., April 20 (AP).—The Frostburg Junior Chamber of Commerce at a public meeting tomorrow night will discuss preliminary plans in a move to increase the capacity of water distribution in Frostburg.

The Junior Chamber said the meeting had been called in response to insistent requests by many Frostburg citizens after a fire here last week.

The organization attempted 18 months ago to arouse public interest leading to action on the problem.

The renewed discussion, chamber spokesmen said, would probably center around a similar outline. If an advisable course is determined at the meeting at the meeting tomorrow, they said, a subsequent and large meeting would be held.

Lyon Park Citizens To Hear Lawn Expert

Dr. John Monteith, jr., lawn specialist for the Department of Agriculture, will speak on "Maintaining Lawns and Turf Grasses" before a meeting of the Lyon Park (Va.) Citizens Association tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Lyon Park Community House.

200 Boy Scouts From 3 District Divisions Test Speed in Mobilizing for an Emergency

THEY'RE PREPARED—More than 200 Boy Scouts of three Washington divisions mobilized at Fairlawn Park yesterday to practice action in an emergency. The "victim" in this picture is Richard Gregory, who receives first aid from Harrison Hagameyer, Lewis Sullivan and Paul Grisso (left to right), all of Troop 18, as other Scouts form a cordon

Prepared for "any emergency," more than 200 Washington Boy Scouts of the Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Divisions gathered at Fairlawn Park on the banks of the Anacostia River yesterday.

To see how quickly Scouts can be mobilized in a single area was the design of Scout executives who called them together on 24 hours notice.

To perform first aid tasks quickly and efficiently—as if working in a vital emergency—was the job of the Scouts who assembled.

They milled together in the semblance of a crowd, searching for 12 of their numbers who wore postage stamps under shirt lapels which designated them as "lost children."

When the "lost" were found by brother scouts, they immediately collapsed. With staffs the scouts cleared the crowds around the prostrate boys and then gave them first-aid treatment for cut hands and skull fracture.

On a basis of speed and efficiency Troop 18 won first place in the first-aid problem. Troop 88 took second place and Troop 67 third place. The Thirteenth Division was rated the highest of the three.

Assistant Scout Executive Ben Buckner was mobilization chief. He was assisted by C. C. Mullady, of the Thirteenth Division; Walter Skinner, the Fourteenth, and John Bullough, the Twelfth. Presiding chief judge was William Armstrong.

Scout executives said that similar mobilizations are planned by all Scout divisions in the District.

Lorrainers Again Driven From Homes

Vichy, April 21.—Coinciding with successes for the Axis powers in the Balkans and North Africa there are signs of renewed moves to make it clear to France that she is in the position of a vanquished nation. Possibly the most symptomatic of these signs lies in the report that again Lorrainers who chose to remain French are being expelled from the Moselle Department.

It is not possible to obtain figures regarding Lorrainers now arriving in Lyons after summary expulsion from hearth and home, but it is understood that the circumstances of their departure are similar to those which obtained in November last—choice between being sent to Poland or to France on two hours' notice, with baggage limited to one grip for each person and funds to about $45. The previous series of expulsions began on November 11—the former Victory Day—and by the end of the month had reached a total of 70,000 as indicated by Marshal Petain himself in a broadcast message of sympathy with the Lorrainers "who have come to seek refuge with their brothers of France."

It was revealed at that time that the French government repudiated statements made to the people expelled that it was a party to the measure. A communique said "these people have unquestionably been told by persons without proper authority that this measure was taken in conformity with an accord reached between the French government and the government of the Reich. The French government issues the most formal denial to this imputation. No measure of this kind was ever under discussion at the Franco-German meetings."

A month later on December 13, Pierre Laval who had conducted previous negotiations with the German authority was summarily removed from his many offices. The precise reasons for his downfall have never been made known in their entirety but now there is reason to believe that the first indication that he was conducting a personal policy without authority of the chief of state came with the revelation that Lorrainers were being expelled.

Rumors are once more circulating to German demands for bases of operations in North Africa. An indirect reply is given by the official French radio station which refers to reports that the French fleet or French bases will be surrendered as "stupid rumors constantly repeated and constantly denied by events."

Mrs. Oliver Hardy Asks $21,625 Alimony

Los Angeles, April 20 (AP).—Oliver Hardy, the comedian, owes $21,625 back alimony, his former wife, Myrtle Lee Hardy, charges.

Mrs. Hardy, filing suit yesterday, said that under a property settlement April 14, 1937, the rotund funny man agreed to pay $250 a week for the rest of her life, or so long as he earned more than $1,000 a week. She claimed that although his income is still above that figure he has paid her but $25 a week intermittently and nothing since February 18, 1939.

Pope Warns Axis Against Nursing Hates

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, April 20.—A plea for humility and charity was made by Pope Pius XII today in a speech which praised those who fought in defense of their country against superior forces and asked that the innocent be spared and that the victors be generous with the vanquished.

This plea came as a climax to a 40-minute address containing the pontiff's most important pronouncement on the harmony and relationship between science and faith.

His holiness was addressing about 1,000 students and graduates of Catholic universities, as well as many members of the Italian Catholic Action. The teaching regarding science and religion was addressed to them and to all Catholics everywhere, but the passages on the war were surely intended as a warning to the Italian and German peoples not to become too proud, not to nurse hatred but to remember that all men are brothers, "whatever sky or language or custom separates them."

"Remember," the Pontiff told his listeners, "that truth is the mother of humility and charity. Teach not pride, which is weak, but the sentiment of duty, self-control, courage, heroism in trial and danger, that virtue and that valor which does not make the victor proud but induces kindness. The world has no need of pride and violence but of charity and love, and along with them that humility which is not cowardice but the truth of self-knowledge.

Says All Are Sinners

"The truth is that all, even the best and the richest among them, are before God as poor sinners and beggars who await the word at the hand of His mercy. The truth is that all men are brothers. In human society none is a stranger to others. The poor need the rich; the rich owe to the poor, the strong to the weak, the wise to the ignorant. All have come from the same dust and by the finger of God.

"All have been redeemed by the same Saviour and are marching toward the same house of the Heavenly Father, where all are called to participate in the same felicity. The truth is that all are sons of the same Father and from the same blood, whatever sky or language or custom separates them.

"These virtues of humility and charity do not diminish the love of country nor lessen the valor, nor prevent the citizen who, in a truly just war, struggles for the defense, the honor and the well-being of his country, from fighting with full strength against an adversary armed to overcome him. But beneficient charity is not fostered by wickedness, not even on battlefields nor in the most difficult vicissitudes. It forbids those who fight to become savage against the innocent or to punish the guilty beyond the limits of justice."

The importance of these remarks must temporarily overshadow the tenets which preceded them, but in the long run the Pope's carefully developed thesis on science and religion will doubtless prove even more important.

Reason and Faith Sisters

Speaking of the medieval universities which flourished under the protection of the church, he said that one sometimes found "an admirable accord of the science of reason with divine science which rendered the human intellect angelic."

But with the passage of time there came "divorce and an antagonism between science and religion." However, "the truth of reason and the truth of faith are never in contrast but are sisters of unequaled beauty."

"Science is an exquisite wine which sometimes goes easily to the head. In your work, both of research and teaching, passions can bring disorders; curiosity, vanity, pride, surrender and jealousy are on the watch. A true scholar, a true master, a true jurist, a true laboratory worker will not stand securely and fully on the way and in the dignity of his profession without a strong interior life and a delicate sense of duty, without that strength which Christians achieve from the most inexhaustible of all sources: The examples of mercy of our Lord."

Catholic Students Take Decency Oath

Throngs of Catholic high school and college students and alumni yesterday again pledged to refrain from buying or reading salacious literature or attending undesirable films.

Members of the Sodality Union, Junior Sodalities and Newman Clubs of the Washington Archdiocese, they marched into St. Matthew's Cathedral for the annual Legion of Decency rally, and uttered the pledge under the direction of the Rev. James L. Harley, S. J. He is spiritual director of the high school sodalities.

The Right Rev. Msgr. Edward L. Buckey, P. A., rector of the Cathedral, celebrated solemn benediction. Assisting were the Rev. John P. Bradley, of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, deacon; the Rev. George L. Gingras, of St. Francis De Sales Church, subdeacon; the Rev. Charles Williams, C. S. V., of the Victorian College, deacon of the exposition, and the Rev. J. Jennings Clark, spiritual director of the Sodality Union, master of ceremonies.

The Sodality Union choir led the congregational singing, with Miss Margaret Walsh playing the organ accompaniment. The committee handling arrangements was headed by Miss Mary Mattingly, president of the Sodality Union, and Miss Mary Louise Healy, president of the high school sodalities.

Confused Taxpayers

Confusion over liability to the District income tax may be seen in the fact that 7,000 persons couldn't make up their minds to file returns until the last day. The courts have ruled that workers for Uncle Sam need not pay the District, even though they live here, if they maintain "domicile" elsewhere. The rush may indicate that many were doubtful of their domiciles and had last-minute twinges of conscience. One woman, at least, was affected by an appeal to fairness. She said she votes in Wisconsin and doesn't think she should have to pay taxes here. "Would you phone Wisconsin," the collector asked, "if your house caught fire?" Her decision to shell out moves us to believe that many other District residents "domiciled" elsewhere would give this city their allegiance if they got the proper legislative encouragement.

New Cars

Another sign that business is going to be far from usual during the present emergency is the decision to reduce automobile and truck output by 20 per cent during the coming production year. This will serve the double purpose of releasing vital defense materials, of which this industry consumes great quantities, and also of making room for more defense work in automobile factories. The fact that Mr. Knudsen referred to the proposed reduction as "an initial cut" is a strong hint that further curtailment is to be expected. With shortages developing in many defense materials used in the manufacture of motor vehicles, defense needs must obviously take precedence over those of private automobile users. As a matter of fact, the inconvenience caused the public by the prospective cut in automobile output is a small price to pay for the contribution to defense thus made possible.

The automobile user will wonder what will be the effect of the new order upon the consumer market. Well, the projected output for the coming year will much more than cover replacements of cars ready for scrapping. Some automobile owners, to be sure, will have to use their present cars longer than they had intended. But for their comfort it is worth bearing in mind that over 3,100,000 cars reported to be in use last July were of the vintage of 1929 and earlier years, with another 2,900,000 dating from 1930 and 1931. In course of time (if or when further reductions in output are announced), it may become necessary to establish some system of preference for special classes of buyers whose business makes it necessary to replace outworn automobiles with new ones. But that is looking rather far ahead into the future. There is also a possibility that individuals may rush to buy cars (new and old) and hold them for later resale at inflated prices, as was done at the time of World War I.

The impact of the new order upon prices is harder to determine. It is not as pressing from the standpoint of defense as, say, the price of steel. After all, the Government's chief concern is to assure a steady flow of defense materials and equipment at reasonable prices. However, the automobile industry itself—both manufacturers and dealers—will have to face certain adjustment problems in doing business with the car buying public. They are under an obligation to see that the enforced cut in output does not work unnecessary hardship or result in price markups not warranted by higher production and distributive costs. In case of dealers in second-hand cars, control over prices would admittedly be extremely difficult. And the prices at which new cars are sold are so affected by the allowances for old ones as to make prediction concerning the price outlook in that field extremely hazardous.

Another problem already causing forward-looking automobile owners concern is the anticipated shortage of skilled mechanics to do repair work for garages. While no great trouble has arisen so far, the shifting of garage repair men to defense industries is proceeding apace. And with a larger percentage of old cars in use, the amount of essential repair work will certainly increase. But again the inconvenience caused the public by these changes will be a minor matter compared with the major advantages of releasing labor for more important defense work. A good many owners of cars will learn how to help themselves if they have less easy access to garage repair facilities, just as they will learn to ride without grumbling in older models that still have plenty of good service left in them.

Cocktail From Lethe

Almost it seems the time has come for Macaulay's New Zealander (if he does not happen to be otherwise engaged in Greece) to begin his sketch of the ruins of St. Paul's. Probably nothing but the direct intervention of Providence could have saved the cathedral in the great bombardment of Thursday morning. Evidently it was in that raid that the bomb crashed through its magnificent dome into the crypt, and, by an unspeakably sad irony, obliterated the famous inscription on the tomb of its architect. It was not the first time that St. Paul's had been hit, nor, probably, will it be the last. When the war is over, hardly a stone may be left of historic London, for the known wreckage thus far includes the Inner Temple, which dates to Norman times; St. Giles Cripplegate, a Tudor relic, and the Victorian City Temple, now in ashes. The censor is probably holding back news of a lot of other damage and perhaps by now (for the raids have not let up) even the remnants of the Roman wall have been obliterated.

It will be remembered that Macaulay's metaphor was drawn to point the antiquity and permanence of the Church of Rome. But, ironically, the British have announced that the Eternal City itself will be bombed if the Nazis dare to raid Athens, Cairo and Alexandria. True, they promise to spare Michelangelo's great Cathedral of St. Peter and all else that lies within the boundary of the sovereign Vatican state. But they also warn that the Italians themselves are prepared to destroy this noblest handiwork of their race, if only it can be made to appear that the British have done it. Meanwhile the Germans have made a great to-do about the damage to their "cultural centers" in Potsdam and Berlin, meaning, among other things, the imperial palace and the opera house. But they have not said a word about the great medieval monuments of Cologne, Munich and Dusseldorf, which, too, have been endangered by British raiders. What a curious perversion of values! Even more perverted, however, is the fact that nothing is said about the German lives that must have been taken in those counter-raids, amid all this fuss about an ugly rococo palace and an uglier opera house.

With all his marvelous gadgets of slaughter man will not succeed in utterly obliterating his own species, nor this civilization its own history. It is true that many civilizations as mighty or mightier than our own must have been vanished without leaving even a relic of a pyramid, or of an aqueduct, or a temple—no, not even as much as a legend. This was not so in the Dark Ages, thanks to the early Christians, and our records no doubt will be spared again. Moreover, amid all the present destruction, the fact remains that the highest quality of our civilization is being revealed while its material habiliments are being razed: courage, love, sacrifice, faith. As Burke once said, "War throws a full light on the value of the hearts of a people." That is certainly the case in Britain today.

British In Iraq

By landing troops at Basra, at the mouth of the Tigris, the British have reduced the danger of Iraq becoming a tool of the Axis. The latter possibility arose when the pro-Nazi element headed by Rashid Ali Beg Gailani, inspired and assisted it may be by Axis agents, seized the government at Bagdad the other day. Not only is Iraq rich in oil, but wedged in as it is between Turkey, Syria and Iran, it occupies a position of considerable strategic significance. With German troops flanking Turkey in uncomfortable proximity to the Dardanelles, the setting up of a pro-Axis regime in Iraq suggested that Hitler was about to employ against the Ankara government the same squeeze tactics he had used with great success against so many nations in Europe.

The timing of the Bagdad coup d'etat was also propitious from the German point of view. A German army was moving down into Greece while another army was sweeping all before it in Libya and beginning to threaten Alexandria and the Suez Canal. The holding up of the German drive in Egypt, however, gave the British a breathing spell which they have used to good advantage not only to fortify their positions in the western desert but also to send troops into Iraq. When he came into power Gailani, probably with his tongue in his cheek, had declared that he proposed to maintain his nation's foreign policies unchanged, and would keep the Anglo-Iraq treaty in full force. That, to be sure, would probably not have prevented him from allowing Iraq to become the base of operations for an increasing number of German agents. But the British have been too quick for him. Taking him at his word they have come into the Arab kingdom, citing by way of justification a clause in the treaty permitting them to do so.

Not only will this action make it difficult for Hitler to use Iraq as a club with which to threaten Turkey and Syria. It also means, in the event that the British are forced to clear out of the Eastern Mediterranean, that the oil of Mosul will not feed Hitler's war machine. It would be a relatively simple matter for them, if it is found necessary to do so, to smash the pipeline to Haifa, and thus to make it difficult for the Germans to capitalize Iraq as a prize. At the same time Great Britain will now be able to help Turkey if Germany should attack that nation.

Prodigal Spending

No wonder the Administration is said to be exerting pressure to eliminate from the agricultural appropriation bill outlays totaling $450,000,000 which the Senate added to the House bill. Even if these additions, mostly unbudgeted, should be dropped from the conference bill, 1942 appropriations would still be unwarrantably large. While the House bill carried direct appropriations somewhat below those of the current fiscal year, the total is actually larger with the inclusion of $162,000,000 of parity payments authorized but not appropriated for. The failure of Congress to apply the pruning knife vigorously to agricultural relief outlays is inexcusable in view of the emergency confronting the country. The bad impression already produced by Congressional prodigality, however, would be mitigated somewhat if the milder House proposals are accepted in place of the Senate bill.

This week the House Ways and Means Committee will begin hearings on a tax program reportedly designed to raise $3,500,000,000 of new revenue. This additional tax burden will inevitably have to be borne largely by the country's wage earners. No doubt they will willingly surrender more of their income to the Government if they feel assured that their tax dollars are being used to buttress the national defenses. But their faith in the single-mindedness of purpose of their representatives is likely to be badly shaken if Congress continues in the midst of a great national emergency to scatter subsidies lavishly to aid the farmers. It is not as if the farmers are in a bad way. Farm income is at a comparatively high level and is steadily improving. Senator Byrd delivers a harsh but just judgment when he says that "it is little short of an outrage that the taxpayers should be asked for tremendous increases in taxes without drastic reductions in nondefense spending." We hope the Senator's words will influence the Conference Committee.

District Rents

Whatever the fate of the Randolph bill, the start of hearings on this rent control proposal puts Congress on guard against any profiteering by wildcat real estate operators. The legislators always have been interested in living costs in the city where they spend most of their time, and at least once in recent years they have investigated housing conditions here. Their continuing attention will be a powerful factor against any disastrous rise in rents which, from the best indications yet available, are still fairly stable. The Washington Real Estate Board and the Building Owners and Managers Association are against taking advantage of the Capital's crowded state to raise rents, and some instances are known in which managers have refused to go on as agents for owners who insisted on a hike. Competition from private operations under the new Title VI of FHA will help to peg rents in the lower price brackets, where there are no dwellings to spare. Nevertheless, there have been complaints of increasing costs in just this category, which is most needed for defense workers. Harry S. Wender, first vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, may be justified in his testimony before the House District Defense subcommittee, that "no rent emergency has been shown to exist." But if there is an emergency, it should be shown, and two committees of the District's defense council are considering a study which should determine whether the complaints are well founded. Only by a watchful attitude and a clear knowledge of the facts, to say the least, can Washington be insured against a repetition of the rental troubles of World War days.

SEA ISLAND DUSK, CHINCOTEAGUE

A child cries on the wind's edge
For a vanished harbor and a blown sail;
For the cloven ox-hoof plodding sand
Through black pines between the island waters.

A child runs with the wind's pace,
Following bright manes of island ponies
Foaled in wildness, pasturing between
The bay and ocean.

A child elusive as a heron's shadow . . .
Though you find her footprint, Islander,
You will never track her through salt grasses!

Lighter than foam upon the high curled breaker,
Fleeter than your discerning,
She is gone with the tide's turning.

Of Sacrifice

In The Post's letter column of April 17 two letters appeared advocating (1) that housewives "sacrifice" their aluminum houseware to prevent or alleviate an impending aluminum shortage, and (2) that families "sacrifice" by doubling up with the new defense workers who are unable to obtain decent living quarters at reasonable rentals.

Already the housewives of Washington are sacrificing more than they can afford by being forced to pay increasingly exorbitant prices for food and rent.

Our Government has created the machinery to curb profiteering, to investigate the aluminum industry, and to guide the building of defense housing. There is a "rent freezing" bill in Congress.

Let these agencies begin to function in earnest. When food prices are no longer permitted to rise through war profiteering; when the aluminum industry has been clamped down on; when low-cost housing is being constructed (instead of the present homes that are so far from town that the average Government worker cannot afford the transportation); when the "rent control" bill is passed—then we should begin to speak about sacrifices.

Meanwhile, the women of Washington should support and fight for these reforms, and not be led into giving up two basic things every wife and mother is entitled to: a well equipped kitchen and the privacy of her home.

D. A. R. Convention

The D. A. R.'s from near and far
Have come by train, have come by car.
They all intend to see the town
From cherry trees to Eleanor's gown.

At break of dawn their days begin
With grapefruit juice to make them thin.
A piece of toast, a gossip sheet
About some folks they hope to meet.

The doormen greet each satin chest
Bedecked with medals of the best.
The doors revolve and off they go
To meet and lunch and see a show.

Then back to bathe their swollen feet,
And out once more upon the street.
Too tired to walk, a cab they call;
From there begins a traffic stall.

Shaking their heads with many a sigh
When they see full taxis sight-see by,
Government workers know it's not far
To that annual convention of the D. A. R.

D. C. And The Overton Plan

Your editorial, "Support For Overton," in The Post of April 8, expressing gratification at President Roosevelt's reported indorsement of the Overton plan for measuring the amount of the annual Federal payment toward the expenses of the District of Columbia, seems to indicate that you, like many others, fail to see the dangers inherent in the President's suggestion that this payment be allocated to capital expenditures, and that all maintenance costs be charged to the local taxpayers.

More than 60 years ago people of Washington sold their birthright of local self-government for a mess of pottage in the form of a promise of an annual Federal contribution of one-half of the cost of the local government. That promise was observed for quite a long time, but if it were still honored, there would be no present necessity for the Overton plan, the local income tax, or any of the other proposed methods of raising money for local municipal purposes. We should not make a similar mistake this time.

It seems to be difficult for many people—and not all of them are members of Congress—to comprehend the fact that Washington is a city, a large city, and, like other cities, furnishes municipal services to its inhabitants. In this respect it does not differ from other cities except that its principal industry, the Federal Government, pays no taxes on either the land or the buildings owned by it. True, the Federal Government pays no taxes on property owned in other cities, and some members of Congress oppose the Overton plan because they fear that it would set a precedent for the making of Federal "contributions" to other cities, or States. However, the values of Federally owned property in other cities are inconsiderable in comparison with Washington, and form but a small part of the value of privately owned property.

The argument for the Overton plan is not that it is a perfect means of measuring the equitable obligation of the Federal Government to pay for municipal facilities and services received, but that it does appropriate a measure of that obligation, in that it is based upon the areas of properties which, if they were not Federally owned, would be taxed. It is not a full measure of that obligation because the Federal properties are largely situated in sections of high land values, and, further, the Overton plan does not consider Federal buildings at all, whereas private buildings are taxed. Nevertheless, it is a much fairer plan than the present haphazard method of making "contributions" at the whim of each successive Congress.

To tie the Overton plan to a requirement that the money obtained thereby be allocated to capital expenditures would defeat its very purpose, which is equitably to reimburse the municipality for services supplied. It would be much more logical to allocate the money solely to maintenance expenses. But why allocate it at all? The local taxpayers' money is not allocated. And the further requirement that all local tax money be used solely for maintenance purposes would open the way for an endless succession of disputes and injustices, beside which the present annual dispute respecting the size of the Federal "contribution" would fade into insignificance.

The only sensible approach to the problem of fiscal relations between the District of Columbia and the Federal Government is to regard Washington as a municipality, with limits coincident with those of the District. This municipality necessarily furnishes municipal facilities and services to all properties within its borders, including those of the Federal Government. The recipients of these services should pay for them, if not directly, in the form of realty taxes, then indirectly, in some manner. Since the Federal Government cannot be taxed it is only fair that it make annual payments approximating in some measure its equitable obligation to pay for services received. Further, this municipality ought to be self-governing, subject only to reasonable limitations imposed by Congress in the same manner as State legislatures impose limitations on the activities of cities chartered by them. Such a conception of the City of Washington, chartered by Congress, is in full accord with the contemplation of the power of "exclusive legislation" granted Congress by the Constitution.

KENNETH P. ARMSTRONG.

Strikes In Defense

Why does our Government allow the C. I. O. to defeat the progress of our defense program through strikes? Why does our President send our young men to training camps and ask them to give up their occupations at good pay, and allow the C. I. O. to hold up the defense program for greatly increased pay? Is it fair to ask our soldier boys to do all the sacrificing and the C. I. O. to profit at will at their and the country's expense and sacrifice?

If there is one lesson which the history of the past teaches with unfailing accuracy it is that no government can maintain its stability and security in the face of national danger when the drafted soldiers are required to make great sacrifices and the folks back home spike the guns, for the sake of personal gain.

It is impossible to conceive of a patriotism that sits down and does nothing when a nation is in imminent peril. The only possible conclusion one can arrive at when so many strikes break out at the instigation of the C. I. O., where the defense program is involved, is that the strike element in the C. I. O. is inspired by subversive elements which belong to the Fifth Column.

The public is losing its sympathy for the exceeding selfishness of the C. I. O., which seeks to make profit out of other people's miseries and misfortunes. It is high time that the Government does something to stop strikes on defense projects, or our Nation will meet the same fate France did in its failure to prepare because of strikes.

"God's Country"

My neighbor showed me, in The Post of April 18, Robert St. John's article titled: "10,000 Died in Belgrade," and said: "Aren't you glad to be in God's country." Her face was bright with pride and happiness.

Well, I just couldn't get a kick out of being in God's country after reading this article; I couldn't even eat any breakfast.

So, the poor Serbs had to meet the Panzer divisions with oxen-drawn artillery; so the civilians were ordered not to clog the roads, but to die on their thresholds, if necessary, as there were no shelters; so 10,000 died in Belgrade alone, and broken bodies dotted every street!

Last week, another neighbor said to me: "It is not that I object to Johnnie being drafted, but they ought to let him finish law school." I hope, for decency's sake, that no Serb in this country heard her.

As I am of French origin, my neighbors never miss a chance to boast how happy we are over here, compared to over there. Strange enough, I just cannot join in the rejoicing. Serbs are not of my race, Greeks either, and my country is at peace, but I don't see that any decent human being can boast of their peace, abundance and happiness when other human beings are massacred all over the world. Aren't you afraid that, some day, nobody will want to die for dear Old New York?

No Cherry-Blossom Festival and no Baseball Opening can make me forget the oxen-drawn artillery of the poor Serbs and the consequences.

The Post Impressionist

Printing Shop Saga

During the early 1930's I was getting my fill of East Side impressions via the mushroom print shops that had cropped up on almost every block of New York's downtown streets. I had graduated from a mere printer's devil into a more or less expert hand compositor and proofreader. In these shops, most of them of the two-by-four variety, your status did not much matter. You could just as well be called upon to wash the presses or distribute type or even sweep the floor, the while your mind was set on the noble art of printing. Moreover, you could even be left with the entire print shop on your hands, while your boss went about hunting for business.

It was on one of those days when my employer was away that one of the strangest and most interesting characters that I was to encounter on the East Side made his inauspicious entrance. This character was a tall, gaunt fellow, rather disheveled, the worse for wear, and supported by a cane. He looked to be a man well in his seventies, yet his voice had a strangely youthful sound.

"Hey, boy," he greeted me. "Any job I can pick up here? . . ."

I interrupted him rather abruptly: "Sorry, but my boss is out."

He then began to plead in his shrill voice: "I haven't eaten for two days. Say, boy, I'll take a drink of water."

I was touched and led him to the backroom which served as a little warehouse for the print shop. I took the rusty tin cup which stood on the washbasin in the corner and filled it with water. The man gulped it down in one swallow and asked for more.

When we came back to the shop, the stranger pulled out some papers from his pocket. Very eagerly, he said: "I guess, boy, this'll tell you who I really am."

He handed me a letter which had a very familiar scrawl on it. Yes, I remember. It was the famous drawn-out handwriting of Mark Twain.

"This is a letter my cousin wrote me a few years before he died," the old man told me. "I was upstate then and Mark lived here on Fifth Avenue."

I gasped at the words "my cousin" and went on to read the letter. The famous humorist was inquiring as to his cousin's well-being. Here and there in the letter were the usual witticisms of Twain, interspersed by some cynical and bitter reflections on life. From what I could gather from the letter, Robert Clemens (the man now before me) had been connected with the Webster Publishing House. Twain at one time had a large interest in this publishing house. At any rate, the letter sounded just like the humorist in his last years.

The entire thing interested me immensely, although it still sounded a bit incredible.

"I guess I don't look it," Robert told me, "but I was 80 last June."

To corroborate the genuineness of the statements in the letter Robert now showed me a daguerreotype which he had been holding in his hand. It showed Twain and himself in a companionable pose, akimbo fashion and smiling quite lightheartedly.

The picture looked like a good resemblance of this man in his younger years. It was also a typical portrait of Mark Twain when he was at the zenith of his career.

"I guess you wonder what brought me to my fix now," Robert went on. "You see, boy, it's all the machine that's done it. If it weren't for the machine, Mark wouldn't have been in such hot water when the Webster House went broke. He just took it into his head to get some typesetting machine out for the world and he had sunk all his fortune into it. With me it worked the other way around. I've always hated the machine. I can't do a thing but set type by hand to this day. I wouldn't go near a machine if I had to starve. And that's just why, boy, I've had to starve."

I looked the man over a bit more searchingly. His untrimmed, white mustache, his reddish complexion and his vividly alert eyes bore a strange resemblance to the pictures which showed his deceased cousin in his old age.

"Well, boy," he added, as I kept silent, "I'll be running along. Maybe I can pick up something to do in some of the other plants around here."

He took his cane and was beginning to limp out of my shop.

"Wait a while, Mr. Clemens," I stopped him short. "Here's something to keep you going meantime."

I took out a half-dollar and gave it to him. It was a sum that I then could scarcely begrudge myself for any but the most deserving.

The old man's face lit up in a grateful smile.

"Thanks, boy," he said with feeling. "This'll take care of my supper and room for tonight."

As Robert Clemens limped slowly out of the door, I tried hard to imagine what lodging and what supper he had in store for himself that night.

Two months later, my struggling employer was forced to vacate his print shop and sell his equipment in auction. I was left in the lurch. Fortunately, however, I soon hit upon a larger printing establishment which was only a stone's throw from my East Broadway room. Here I found a strange conglomeration of characters: Two partners who were at each other's throats more than they were at work; a stuttering composing room foreman who made one laugh at every other word which he uttered; two or three naive and fun-loving college boys, who were rabid Communists to boot; last, but certainly not least, a drunken, crackerjack pressman who could recite Poe at random and quite beautifully.

Such were the days which one calls, for lack of a better name, "days of the depression." I really wonder if there was anything truly depressing about them. Instead, they were, to my mind, days chock full of intense and exciting, though humble and lonely, adventures amidst the zestful and ever hopeful life of New York's lowly East Side.

Obsolescent Issue

By Mark Sullivan

Changes In The Theory Of Convoy

ALL THIS TALK about convoying is water over the dam. By the time Senator Tobey gets action on his resolution against convoying, the issue in this form will be recognized as obsolete. Within recent months, the nature of the shipping problem has changed, and convoying is not the answer to it. It is doubtful if "convoying," in the familiar sense, is now contemplated as a function for the United States Navy. It is more likely that the convoying already being done by the British navy may be reduced or greatly modified.

SULLIVAN

"Convoying," as practiced in the World War and so far in this, means that cargo ships are gathered together in group of from 5 to 15 or more. They cross the ocean together. For protection they are accompanied, that is, "convoyed," by naval vessels. This convoying was a well devised protection when submarines were the thing most feared. But submarines are not now the only enemy; they are not the major enemy. The major enemy is now bombing planes.

Large scale destruction of cargo shipping by bombing planes is a Nazi innovation in this war. Like the other Nazi innovations, such as the large scale use of tanks and other motorized equipment, it calls for a new form of defense. This is just now being developed.

We commonly think of the problem as the protection of cargo ships at sea—we think of it as an ocean problem only. But the real problem, accurately stated, is much broader. The real problem is to procure goods in the United States, and then: (a) get them across the ocean; (b) get them into British harbors, and (c) get them landed on British docks.

OF THESE three steps, the first, crossing the ocean, is the only one in which convoying is any help—and even for this minor part of the process, convoying is becoming obsolete. It is the last two steps, getting the ships into British harbors, and then getting the goods out of the ships onto the docks—it is this that is the real problem. The essential, and extremely serious, problem of getting supplies from America into English hands is a matter of harbors and docks and the waters nearby.

Even if the United States were to undertake the entire burden of convoying or otherwise protecting ships from America four-fifths of the way across the ocean, it would not help a great deal. The real difficulty exists in the last fifth of the ocean trip, in the British harbors, and in the docks. In this area the enemy is not submarines, and hence convoying would not help. The enemy in this territory is mainly German bombing planes.

For practically a year, with constantly increasing intensity and increasing success, German bombing planes have concentrated on British docks. Many of these the German planes have so ruined as to make them hardly usable. German planes have concentrated also on British harbors, making many of them almost unusable. The German planes concentrate on British ships when they are at the docks, or in the harbors or approaching the harbors.

AGAINST THE GERMAN bombing planes, the real defense is British planes. Naval vessels, which are a good defense against submarines, are not effective against planes. One type of naval vessel, the airplane carrier, would be helpful; and a plan for increased use of these is under consideration.

To think of convoying by naval vessels as the best defense of cargo shipping, is to think in terms of the past, of the Great War. To use convoying now is to do what would have been right the last time—and this is a common form of fallacy. The conditions of this war are not the conditions of the Great War.

Even for the simple, limited purpose of defense against submarines, convoying is coming to be looked upon as having many defects. When cargo ships travel in a convoy, the speed of all the ships is reduced to the speed of the slowest one. A convoy of 15 ships is much easier for German planes to spot than a single ship. It is coming to be felt that cargo ships might do better to travel singly.

While convoying, as such, is becoming obsolete, the larger problem remains—the protection of goods and cargo ships passing from the United States to England. Safe delivery of the goods is imperative for British success. It is uncertain whether Britain, at this time, can supply adequate protection herself. There is search for new ways by which we can help.

Tax Worthy Of The Task

By Ernest K. Lindley

Auspicious Beginning

AT LAST we may be about to get Federal taxes which approach in magnitude the national task we have set for ourselves.

The beginning was so auspicious that Treasury officials, who have had bad luck with Congress on previous occasions, are holding their breath. Secretary Morgenthau called in the leaders of the Congressional committees responsible for revenue legislation. For the first time he invited the minority representatives with the Democrats. He boldly proposed to them the formula that two-thirds of Federal expenditures during the national defense effort be financed by taxes and only one-third by borrowing. This means approximately $3,500,000,000 in new taxes, perhaps more. Every person present agreed to the formula.

The primary responsibility for drafting the tax bill rests with the House Ways and Means Committee. The Treasury, of course, will present suggestions. Secretary Morgenthau has put down three guide-posts:

1. Sacrifices by everybody who is able to bear them.

2. A tax structure which will be ironclad in preventing war-boom millionaires.

3. No general sales tax.

Additional levies of $3,500,000,000 are bound to hit almost everybody. But most of the burden will fall on persons with incomes of $2,000 or more, and especially on those with incomes up to $25,000. There are more people in the $2,000 to $25,000 brackets than ever before in our history.

THE TREASURY, in accordance with its recent custom, denies that it has a definite tax program. Officially it will only submit general recommendations and estimates of receipts for different types and weights of taxes. Given the amount of money to be raised, however, it is a fair assumption that all, or nearly all, the following changes will have to be made:

1. Lowering of personal income tax exemptions. For married persons, perhaps to $1,000 from the present $2,000. Perhaps complete elimination of the exemption, now $1,000, for an unmarried person. This would bring many thousands of wage earners into the personal income tax system. In most cases, the individual tax payments would be small. But, it is argued that when many single men are being drafted for military service, others, and single women, too, should be called upon to make at least a small contribution in the form of taxes.

2. Increase in the normal personal income tax rate—from 4 per cent to 8 per cent.

3. An increase in the surtax rates, especially on incomes below $100,000. Higher ones already are very heavily taxed.

4. An increase in the corporation income tax, perhaps to 30 per cent.

5. An increase in the excess profits tax, by closing loopholes and lowering the return allowed before the tax begins to apply.

6. Substantial increases in the taxes on liquor, wine and beer.

7. A tax on soft drinks.

8. Excise taxes on most luxuries, from movies to automobiles—and especially on products containing steel, aluminum and other metals needed for national defense.

9. Increased taxes on gifts.

The tax theory of the Administration is changing to meet the new need. In recent years—since it began to have a tax theory—the effort has been to tax savings on the ground that we had more than our economy needed. The theory was executed very imperfectly. But the Administration did stand firm against a general sales tax and, in general, against new taxes which would curtail consumption and so hold back economic recovery.

NOW TAXES to curtail consumption are in order. The defense boom is pumping new purchasing power into the hands of wage earners. And, at the same time, defense needs require that civilian use of certain articles be reduced. The automobile manufacturers, for example, have agreed to cut production for civilian use by 20 per cent during the coming automobile year, beginning August 1. There will not be enough automobiles to meet the demand.

How should the curtailed supply of new automobiles be allocated? The way of traditional economics would be to let the automobile manufacturer advance their prices sharply. But taxes being what they are, or are about to become, it is doubtful if they would earn any more money that way—even if they were minded to risk keen public displeasure.

One way—perhaps the soundest way all around—is to put a heavy excise tax on each automobile. This increases the cost to the buyer and so decreases the demand, but the difference goes to the United States Treasury. An excise tax of from $100 to $200 on light cars and higher on more expensive cars is possible. Similar taxes are needed on many other products using metal and machines and labor which are required for national defense purposes.

On the other hand there is no need to restrict consumption of many articles. We have plenty of food, plenty of raw material and machinery to make clothing, furniture and other products that go into the standard of living. So the Administration, while favoring excise taxes on specific products, stands firm against a general sales tax.

The new taxes will be felt. But there are many signs that in readiness to be taxed for purposes of national defense, the American public generally has been well ahead of both Congress and the Administration. Certainly there must be few citizens now earning a living who, in looking around the world, do not feel that they would give another large slab of what they are getting to keep what they have.

Capital Parade

By Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner

Fact-Facing

THE UNREALITY of the national state of mind is shockingly illustrated by the reactions to the news from the Mediterranean—first mercurially cheerful, and now hysterically gloomy. Hitler has a great army, a powerful air force, and a brilliant general staff. Consequently any one is living in a dream world who supposes that a little good news means victory, or does not expect a great deal more bad news before the war is over.

ALSOP

At present, for example, it is quite conceivable that the tragedy in the Balkans will be followed by final liquidation of the entire British position in the Mediterranean. In the shrewd language of Col. William J. Donovan, the British commander in the Mediterranean. Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, "had a toehold and wanted to make it a foothold." Accordingly he gambled greatly for great gains, sending what men he could muster into Greece, using most of those he had left to break the Italian hold on West Africa, and betting that the difficulties of gathering strength in Tripoli and crossing the intervening desert barrier would protect Egypt from German attack.

He knew it was a gamble. He described it as a gamble to Donovan and other American observers with whom he talked. Since he had good reason to hope American ships would be allowed into the Red Sea when the Italians were cleared out of it, thus partly solving his crucial transport problem, his gamble was not a bad one. Unfortunately, however, the odds were too heavy against him.

IN THE BALKANS two things happened, according to the best information obtainable here. First, London had prepared to send out a number of additional divisions to Egypt, bringing the force destined for Greece up to six divisions. With six divisions, the campaign would have been far from hopeless. All the weak points in the main British-Greek line anchored on Mount Olympus could have been strongly reinforced. At least one division could have been sent into Yugoslavia, to establish some sort of liaison with the Yugoslav army. But the shipping shortage prevented more than three divisions from reaching Greece in time. With R.A.F. detachments and corps and base troops included, there were only 75,000 British troops in the Balkan peninsula when the fighting started. That was not enough.

Then, second, Gen. Simovitch and the other Yugoslav leaders had always declared they would follow a simple strategy. This was to withdraw their entire strength into the mountains of South Serbia, making their stand in easily defensible terrain and abandoning the rest of the country. But the Croatians held out against the Simovitch government. During the negotiations with the Croatian leader, Dr. Matchek, it was impossible to denude Croatia of defense. Thus the Yugoslav strategy was never carried out, and the Yugoslavs, being weak in the south, were cut off from the British and Greeks in the first days.

Yet is is still believed here that the Yugoslavs succeeded in sabotaging their copper and lead mines, and blocking the Iron Gates of the Danube, through which Rumanian oil comes to Germany. And if these things alone are true, leaving out the upset of the German time table, the Balkan campaign was far from being a net loss.

THE THREAT to Egypt and the British base in Alexandria, which everyone is now busily minimizing, is actually far more serious than the loss of the Balkan campaign. The Germans have largely surmounted the difficulty that was thought too great for them. A steady stream of troops was first sent into Tripoli from Sicily in large transport planes, which could carry hundreds of men daily by making several round trips. Mechanized material was simultaneously run across the straits between Sicily and Tripoli by night, in Italian freighters, while the British Mediterranean fleet was busy guarding the convoys to Greece. There is more than a suspicion that the French also cooperated in this German effort, which brought three mechanized divisions into North Africa in a comparatively short space of time.

Those three divisions, with one or more recently added to them, have now taken the risk of crossing the desert and attacking Egypt. Their lines of communication are extraordinarily tenuous. The men captured by the British are reported to be in an advanced stage of exhaustion. Yet it is no use blinking the fact that Wavell will be hard put to it to defend Egypt with part of his force in Greece and most of the rest still to the southward, only just finished with the Italians. If he could bring up all the forces he now has in Somaliland and Ethiopia, he would outnumber the Germans. As matters stand, they heavily outnumber him. They are also near enough to Suez to send fighter escorts with their bombers, thus permitting daylight attacks on the canal. It has been closed twice already by mines laid by night bombing. It will probably be closed again.

KINTNER

If the British restore their position in the Mediterranean, it will be a great victory. If they do not, it will be a very serious defeat. But square fact-facing in this country is much more important than British success or failure in the Mediterranean. The outcome of the war depends on the United States.

By easing the shipping shortage alone, we had it in our power to change the Mediterranean picture. We failed to do so. So long as we are guilty of that sort of all-out—bad news will continue failure—so long as our effort is not to come. In the words of one of the few consistently foresighted officials in the Administration, "Every month wasted now means six months more of war later." Under the circumstances, it is hard not to feel that the President and the men around him have been derelict in their duty to bring the facts forcibly to the attention of the people.

The Once Over

Twitchell Sounds Off

"Do you wanna know why the democracies and small nations are in this hole?" demanded Elmer Twitchell with more than his usual explosiveness.

Nobody answered, so he continued:

"Plain dumbness, streamlined superficiality, air-conditioned indifference, super pigheadedness and the unalloyed preference for bedtime stories over hard facts! Nero fiddled while Rome burned, but England, France and America not only fiddled while the incendiary squad worked, but put the music on radio programs.

"While the foes of civilization were muscling themselves in the show window and building themselves up for the biggest demonstration of breach of the peace in world history, in full view of everybody, the rest of us were trusting to microphones, oily diplomacy, politicians, programs for easy living and frequent bulletins on new styles in hit-hhiking," continued Elmer.

"We accepted life according to the movie formula which provides that everything comes out all right in a few minutes. While Adolf was preparing the all-out attack on everybody within range we were centering our interest in bigger playgrounds, more picnic grounds for grown-ups, Federal-designed golf courses, Government distribution of softer mattresses and Washington bulletins on 'Rope Skipping as a Main Aim in Life,'

"John Bull and La Belle France may have been complacent and a little juvenile upstairs, but Uncle Sam was Ninny No. 1 and he's beginning to realize it. With the danger from the Nazi preparations as conspicuous as a cannon in a pansy bed, we Americans turned our faces the other way and yelled for more apple sauce and cream of mullarkey."

Elmer was warned that he shouldn't yell so, but he continued: "We substituted the microphone for the lessons of history, the book of rules, the law of common sense and the guide to self-defense. We went in for regional jealousy, class warfare, general suspicion and the slogan, 'If it's new and screwy enough, it's wonderful!'

"We avoided unpleasant facts by switching to a new spot on the radio dial and we subscribed to the idea that no problem was too deep to be solved by a jaunty air and another twist of the button marked 'Volume.'

"We went, hook, line and sinker, for the dope that Hitler was Little Ford Fauntleroy, compared to an American businessman, and that nothing could happen to cramp our style if we abolished standard bookkeeping, torpedoed traditions, let Washington do our worrying for us and wired our Congresman if the milkman forgot to leave cream. We thought everything was done by mirrors, commissions, bureaus and administrators. And if anybody asked the average man which came first, the chicken or the egg, he answered, 'the buttered toast!'

"And look where we are today."

Moscow has now banned anniversary celebrations. Organizations may celebrate only twentieth, fiftieth and one hundredth anniversaries. Birthdays in the case of eminent achievements may be celebrated only when they are fiftieth or more. "The custom of celebrating anniversaries is a very unhealthy practice," says Moscow. Indeed, it is! Think of people having a little fun celebrating a birthday party when they might be out plotting a new order, working up some new hatreds or arranging for a double cross.

Thief Of Time

By Barnet Nover

Will America Also Be Too Late?

THE GERMAN juggernaut continues its relentless drive into Greece. Only a miracle can now save that brave nation whose liberty-loving people are today exemplifying the finest traditions of their magnificent past. It may be merely a matter of days before Greece is added to the long list of Hitler's captives.

NOVER

The present war involved, at the outset, only four European nations. Opposing Germany were Great Britain, France and Poland. There could be no question where lay the sympathies of Danes and Norwegians, Belgians and Netherlanders, Yugoslavs and Greeks. All of these peoples wanted the Allies to win. All of them wanted the Nazi menace destroyed. They realized that unless it was destroyed their independence would be imperilled. But they also wanted to remain at peace. The war they said, thinking wishfully, was not their war.

AS LONG as it suited Hitler's purpose to do so these nations were permitted to remain at peace. When he decided that there were advantages to be gained by attacking them he attacked them. But he did not attack them all at once. He attacked them singly or in pairs. Denmark was overrun and Norway invaded this month a year ago. The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg were next to feel the fearful impact of the German war machine. Yugoslavia is the latest victim. It is now Greece's turn.

Greece had for months valiantly beaten off the Italian onslaught. But the assistance which the hard-pressed British have been able to render the Greeks was necessarily limited and, it turned out, inadequate even to hold up the German drive for any great length of time. So Greece is going under, though she is making Hitler pay dearly for every mile of conquered territory.

SUPPOSE, when the war broke out, that Denmark, Norway, Belgium, the Netherlands, Yugoslavia and Greece had all decided that neutrality was an outworn shibboleth, that it was ruinous for them to remain on the sidelines since to do so would inevitably leave them open to attack under circumstances most suitable for Hitler and most unfavorable to them. Suppose, in other words, they had all done what most of them ultimately did anyway, namely, throw in their lot with the British. Can anyone doubt that the history of these last 19 months would have been very different from what it has been?

Hitler's victories have not been the product of intense military preparations alone, of his heavily mechanized army and tremendous air force. They have also been the product of the disunity among his ultimate victims, the astigmatism of their vision. The Norwegians, the Dutch, the Belgians fought with great bravery when war was thrust upon them. But the odds were against them from the start. That was also true of the Yugoslavs. They were under no illusions, when they rebelled against the dishonorable deal made by their government, as to what their action involved. They knew it meant war and war against the most powerful military nation in Europe. But realizing all that they insisted upon acting like free men. Again the tragedy of it is that they acted too late.

THE LESSON for us is as clear as anything could be. In view of prolonged American isolationist sentiment, our seeming remoteness from the theater of war, the confusion of counsel created by Axis agents and their dupes, this Nation has acted with surprising speed to adjust itself to the dour realities of the world situation. Yet the realities were apparent from the outset. What we are doing now should have been done long ago; what we may do a month or six months or a year from now might, if it were done now, make all the difference in the world.

THERE ARE REASONS why Hitler has thrown a tremendous number of men and weapons into the Balkan fray. He must win soon at whatever cost. And he must win soon because if victory eludes him this year he may never thereafter be able to catch up with it. For with each passing month the industrial power of the United States weighs more heavily in the balance. Given time, it will tilt the scales definitely in Britain's favor.

The resistance of the Yugoslavs and Greeks has thrown his timetable out of kilter. It would be a tragedy if our own procrastination restores the balance in his favor.

Hitler's victory in the Balkans will have enormous strategic and psychological advantage. But the venture will subtract from rather than add to his diminishing resources. The newly conquered regions will mean a further drain of man power for garrison duty among hostile populations. He still has before him the task of overwhelming the British on their home grounds. And he can only do that if he achieves a decisive victory in the Battle of the Atlantic. That is the battle which this Nation cannot, out of self-interest, afford to let him win by default. For if we do the dangers that face us today and against which we are arming at a greater rate than ever before in our history will be quadrupled and octupled. The procrastination of the democracies has always been Hitler's best ally. Our present indecision provides him with his best hope of victory.

$5,000,000 at Stake in Test Of Kansas Fund Publicity Law

By the Associated Press

Topeka, Kans., April 20.—Kansas must decide by July 1 whether the luxury of a "bloodless rebellion" against the Federal Government is worth $5,000,000 a year.

At stake is an 82-year-old Sunflower State tradition of open publicity for all expenditures of public funds.

Five million dollars is the amount Washington pours into the State annually to pay half of each assistance check for the needy aged and other relief recipients. The Federal Social Security Board has stated bluntly that this flow of cash will halt July 1 if Kansas continues to publish names of assistance recipients and amounts of grants after that date.

The 1941 Legislature put the issue up to the citizenry at large by refusing even to introduce a "secrecy" law, although the ultimatum from Washington came before the lawmakers went home April 6.

Gov. Payne Ratner said he would call a special session in the summer to consider the question unless the Federal board changes its position. The executive indicated he hardly expected any backing down.

Leaders in the Legislature and in the Ratner administration took the position that the people should decide so important a matter

"We felt we should obtain the reactions of the people and then could proceed to do whatever is necessary," explained the Governor. "It seems to me that the Federal Government is seeking to destroy the last vestige of the sovereignty of the State of Kansas."

Congress put the nonpublication provision in the Federal social security statutes recently, acting on the theory that needy persons should be spared as much humiliation as possible.

The legal impediment to compliance with Washington's request is embedded in the Kansas constitution, adopted in 1859. The section reads:

"An accurate and detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public moneys, and the several amounts paid, to whom, and on what account, shall be published, as prescribed by law."

Kansas counties publish each month in the official county paper long lists of all their expenditures down to 5 cents for a cake of soap at the jail. Nearly all counties include in these lists payments to those on relief.

The constitutional requirement fits in with a Kansas tradition of "laying all cards on the table" in governmental matters.

A lot of the legislators and the State's militant editors believe the tradition is worth fighting for, even if the foe is the Federal Government.

No Tanks or Planes for Papal Troops; Army 'Goes Ancient'

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, April 20.—Armed forces of the Pope, with a thousand years of military history behind them, are "going ancient" instead of trying to keep up with the modern armies of the world.

Chief reason for their readoption of antique equipment, said one Vatican authority, lies in the fact that the corps does "not constitute an army to which is committed the liberty and honor of a fatherland." The sword that the soldiers of the Pope grasp "is not," Pius XII recently said, "ambitious for bloodstains. It is for the reign of Christ, eager for the well-being of souls; although it is in this world, is not of this world."

In the past, the papal forces fought many battles in defense of the papal states, but no pontifical army, as such, has existed since 1870. The forces now consist of parts of four regiments: Noble Guards, Swiss Guards, Palatine Guards and the gendarmes.

Today—unlike their duties of past years—the service of the Vatican armed corps is predominantly honorary and decorative. Arms have only a historic or esthetic function. The job of the corps is threefold—to defend, if need be, the Pope; to serve as his escort whenever he appears in public or receives personalities; to establish and maintain public order in Vatican City.

Artillery has been abandoned and today not more than six or seven cannon are found in the Vatican, all museum pieces.

The return to the classic equipment was begun some 35 years ago, when Pius X abolished the last horses of the Noble Guards, which had been created as a cavalry unit and which still in the time of Leo XIII rode alongside the papal coach during the daily passage of the Pope in his garden. It was at this time that the ancient helmet and halbred of the Swiss Guard was readopted.

Now, through the initiative of their colonel commander, Count Cantuti Castelvetro, the Palatine Guards are being "antiqued." Their military caps, adopted after the last war, have been abolished and replaced with the shako of the past century—high, falling over the nape of the neck and with a slender red plume in front.

While blue trousers and tunics with their crimson and gold trim are substantially unchanged, the plan is to top them off with sword belts, cartridge box and rifle strap all in white with dagger and sheath of nickel and metal parts of the rifle freed of polishing.

Weapons will continue to be the model '91 rifles donated by the Italian government and the Hemington single-shot muskets which were the first breechloaders to replace muzzleloaders.

U. S. Planes Soon To Have No Peer, Lovett Predicts

Caldwell, N. J., April 20 (AP).—Robert A. Lovett, newly appointed Assistant Secretary of War for Air, predicted here that "three or four months from now you will see American equipment in the air which has no equal."

"The fire power of this air power will be more than adequate," he said in an interview.

Lovett came here to attend the dedication by the propeller division of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation of the largest airplane propeller plant in the country. Sprawling over 380,000 square feet, the plant was completed 96 days after ground was broken. Propellers have been in production here since last October 15.

Commenting on the Nation's mounting strength in the skies, Lovett disclosed that 23 designs for pursuit planes had been approved for contract purposes by the War Department beyond the latest one now in production.

Peixotos Are Feted By Gouthiers at Party

By Carolyn Bell

After nearly a week of parties—all according to protocol—the Governor of the State of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and Senhora do Amaral Peixoto (pronounced peshoto) enjoyed a buffet supper last night where protocol was thrown out of the window. The Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Sembro Gouthier were hosts at this gay affair, which ended up in a song and dance fest.

Earlier in the afternoon the Peixotos were entertained at luncheon by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. They were duly impressed with the White House and laughingly recounted that they had seen the First Lady in her most typical state—for she was dashing off to keep an engagement shortly after luncheon. Senhora Peixoto, who is the daughter of President Vargas of Brazil, is a petite brunette. Last night she wore a pink chiffon frock sprinkled with pearl flowers. Following their visit here they will go to New York for a brief stay before sailing for Rio de Janeiro.

The Gouthier ome on Leroy Place was abloom with flowers. Senhora Gouthier received her guests wearing a printed chiffon frock and an orchid tucked coyly in the side of her dark curls. Guests gathered in the drawing room downstairs as well as upstairs for cocktails before supper. Early arrivals were the Ambassador of Brazil and Senhora de Martins. Senhora Martins was smartly turned out in a printed frock in shades of orange and green. A single diamond glistened in her Raven pompadour.

Justice Murphy Attends Party

After cocktail guests wandered into the dining room where supper was served. Jellied bouillon, ham, turkey, and a green salad were offered. A large bouquet of roses centered the buffet table.

Justice Frank Murphy—who says he hopes to get off to Rio sometime during the summer—was in the throng. Late arrivals were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Berle. Mrs. Berle wore a wreath of daisies in her hair and a white crepe frock. Also there were the Minister Counselor of the Spanish Embassy, Marques de Fontanta, Ladislau Sousa, Berent Freele and Jose Garcia.

Encouraged by an accordionist, guests found seats on the floor and a first-rate sing fest was under way lead by Baron Baeyers, of the French Embassy, and Luiz Franklin Sampaio, of Brazil. Everything from "La Cuccarocha" to "It's a Long Way to Tipperrary" was sung. Later guests gathered in the second-floor drawing room to dance to the excellent records the Goutheirs have collected.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

TE PRIDE OF THE Virginia hunt country, the North Wales Club, of Warranton will be sold at auction on May 5. Sometimes known as the "Millionares Club," the North Wales has been synonmous with lavish entertainments during recent years. It has been famous down through the years for its rolling green fields, huge boxwoods, and handsome stone house.

All of the beautiful antique furniture and other personal property will be put up for sale at public auction on Friday, May 2—the day before the Virginia Gold Cup races at Warrenton on Saturday, May 3. To see North Wales is to love it. To many that have had such happy times there, it will be a sad occasion when it is sold. But it is also certain that the scores and scores of friends of North Wales will be there on May 2 and again on May 5, to see what goes on, to pick up an antique or a momento of the magnificent, home-like place, and to find out who will buy the estate.

THERE ARE MANY prospective buyers, it is said, among them well known people in Virginia, Maryland, and New York who would love to have it as a home. It has been often rumored that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor would come to Virginia and buy North Wales as a home and it is know that the former Wallis Warfield, who has spent much time in Warrenton, had Robert C. Winmill, of Warrenton and New York send her a set of pictures to Nassau to show the Duke.

We are distressed to see the lovely furniture that suits the house so well sold and the furnishings dismantled. The late Edward Weld, of Boston, and Mrs. Weld, decorated and modernized the house to perfection but we know that North Wales will live on looking serene and royal as ever, and that people will go there to wander and enjoy happy hours in its beauty. North Wales, we feel, must fall into good hands again.

THE MARYLAND HUNT CUP, greatest sporting event in America will be run Saturday in the Green Spring Valley and Worthington Valley of Maryland. This steeplechase causes more interest and brings out the largest crowd of sports loving spectators in the country. People come from the North, South and West to the East to see America's classic and at this the forty-seventh running of the Maryland Hunt Cup there promises to be more of a crowd than ever before in its history. It is a lovely motor drive through Virginia and Maryland to reach the hillside where you stand for hours and never get tired for there is so much activity, so many interesting things going on, and so many attractive people to meet. The entries will be available after today and then we will know which of the best timber horses in the world will be seen in the Maryland Hunt Cup on Saturday.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

THE HALLETT JOHNSONS gathered a few old friends together at their cool, attractive house on R Street the other night for one of those intimate little dinners which are part of the charm of Washington. Representative and Mrs. Robert W. Kean strolled over from their house down the street. Mrs. Kean, in black and white flowered organdy, looked more like a college girl than the mother of six children. Someone said, "I certainly would like to see George Gordon again," and Hallett Johnson waved his hand toward the door which was just being opened to admit Mr. Gordon and his pretty little blue-eyed wife. Mrs. Gordon was immediately told how much she resembled her daughter, Senora de Zuberbuhler. The Gordons have settled down in the house which they leased from Mrs. John R. Williams. In spite of her harrowing experiences in Holland under German bombardment and occupation—her husband was the United States Minister to the Netherlands at that time—Mrs. Gordon wishes she were still there "because," she said, "one could help those people."

Also taking part in the reunion was Lamont Belin who was being congratulated on the beauties of the Belins' gardens in Georgetown, and Mrs. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart. After dinner the gentlemen enjoyed some reminiscing which proved the success of the party by keeping them absorbed till a late hour.

ANOTHER RECENT DELIGHTFUL informal dinner was given by the Air Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Pirie for their new neighbors, Gen. and Mrs. Beaumont-Nesbitt. Mrs. Beaumont-Nesbitt arrived ahead of her very busy husband—he is Military Attache at the British Embassy—just to keep the family record for punctuality clear. She looked charming in a sheer black gown with a little jacket sprinkled with silver stars. Another lovely lady present was dark-eyed Mrs. Raymond Lee whose gown was white and draped with classic simplicity. Mrs. Lee, who had known the Beaumont-Nesbitts in England, was giving them news of her husband, Gen. Lee, who lately returned to his post as Military Attache at the United States Embassy in London. Mrs. Lee had an amusing story to tell proving that Government bureaus are human after all. It concerned the finding of a wife for the Lees' dog General Blimp, who had been affianced by Gen. Lee, before his departure for England, to the dog of a "Mr. Smith" in one of the Government bureaus. Mrs. Lee was informed of the engagement by her husband and that "Mr. Smith" was to be found at a certain bureau. Further than that her information didn't go. The story of how the Government bureou turned itself inside out in its collective effort to trace the owner of the prospective canine bride was a saga in itself and proved Mrs. Lee a raconteuse of worth.

AMONG A NUMBER of weekend cocktail parties two of the nicest were given by the Third Secretary of the British Embassy and the Honorable Mrs. Heathcoat Amory, and by Mrs. Ranald Reid. The Amorys received their guests in the cool basement bar which is a feature of their house on Fulton Street and the host proved himself an excellent mixer behind the chromium-decorated bar.

Mrs. Reid's party took place at her apartment overlooking Rock Creek Park. The hostess, as fresh as a breeze in pale beige crepe, was in fine spirits because she had just received news that her husband is to pass through America on his way from one far-off post to another. She is planning to meet him on the West Coast and accompany him across the continent, motoring back for a vacation. At Mrs. Reid's I saw Mrs. Frederic Schenck, who is known to her friends as the lady who carries her grandchild in a knitting-bag. It seems that when she was bringing her daughter's baby over as a refugee from England, Mrs. Schenck invented the knitting-bag cradle in which she took the baby everywhere. The baby could be found, happily parked, under Mrs. Schenck's chair at the dinner table, bridge table, or on deck, and as pleased as Punch with his vantage point.

The ev. F. Bland Tucker officiated at the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Minor W. Thomas, of Williamsburg, Va., was her only attendant. Mr. Thomas was the best man.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy of 18, Who Goes to College, Holds Half-Time Library Job and Helps Evenings in Father's Store, Is Called Lazy by Sister-in-Law; Is She Right?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband's people are in business for themselves. My young brother-in-law, having just graduated from high school, has started to college to study accountancy. When his school day is finished, he works in a library from 1 to 5 p. m., after which he put in two hours in his father's store. He gets paid for these two jobs, although his mother is financing his college studies.

My father-in-law is not well and my husband (his elder son), is running the store, doing work both inside and out, which involves constant strain. I have a feeling that the younger brother is not sincere in his efforts to become an accountant. It is my idea that he is trying to shirk responsibility in going to college; that he is really lazy and looking for a soft job. He would have real opportunity in his father's store to put his knowledge to work, if he were really in earnest. The business is such that he could be a great help, putting into practice what he is learning.

However, he adopts the attitude that he is doing everybody a great favor in putting in a few hours' work each night. But since his college education is being paid for; since he is paid for his work at the store and also at the library (where his occupation is by no means related to accountancy), it seems to me he is getting off very easily. And since he is only 18 years of age, I don't feel that his career would be jeopardized if he offered more assistance to his parents and became a more reliable and responsible person. What do you think?

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

Sister-in-Law Should Pull in Her Claws

DEAR D. I. L.: It seems to me your attitude toward your young brother-in-law is oddly hostile and enviously prejudiced. Is it, perhaps, because your husband was not given a college education by his parents?—but was instead put to work, full time, in his father's store, immediately on graduating from high school? Do you resent what appears to you to be their sentimental partiality toward the younger brother? I think so. And I also think you are making a serious mistake in urgently concerning yourself with "in-law" affairs that are none of your business; and in brooding over a situation which, even if it represented rank injustice to your husband (which I am sure it does not), is, nevertheless, beyond your power to change.

You may be right in thinking the boy is essentially disinterested in accountancy as a life's work. But does that make a case against his character? Not necessarily. For all we know, he may have been jockeyed by his parents (employing the so-called power of suggestion") into electing that branch of study,—because they felt it would fit him nicely for a place in his father's business, and because, at the time, he had not yet formed any definite occupational or professional preference.

You imply disparagement of his library work, for the reason that it is totally unrelated to accountancy. Yet the life stories of most outstandingly successful men and women show that they sampled many fields of endeavor before finally landing on their feet in the work for which they were supremely qualified, by temperament and training. If it is indeed true that the boy can't get enthused over bookkeeping and merchandising, he is heading instinctively in the right direction in testing his reaction to an entirely different type of occupation, while keeping his hand in at the job of work and study his parents have given him to do.

Anything learned is never lost. Sooner or later, one finds use for all one knows,—although perhaps in ways one least anticipated. Moreover, the mental discipline involved in coping with the exact science of mathematics is an experience of inestimable character-value to any young man,—even though he may find the exercise too tedious to appeal as a means of livelihood.

Your theory that because the lad is only 18, he can afford to invest most of his energies in a field of work that is distasteful to him, biding his time to "find himself," doesn't strike me as very clear thinking. It seems an unsympathetic, shortsighted viewpoint. It seems to me the very fact that he doesn't yet know what he wants to do gives all the more reason for exploring in several directions, simultaneously, since he is in the fortunate position of being able to do so. And if it should be that your husband is of a more "dutiful" temperament than his younger brother, it doesn't necessarily follow that his is essentially the more exemplary or constructive behavior. If he elects to compensate, in dogged industry, for what he lacks in enterprise or initiative—why, that is his way of doing; but his brother should not be asked or expected to trail in his footsteps.

In conclusion, I must say that any boy of 18 who combines a college course of study with a half-time job, in addition to working evenings in his father's store (even under duress), is giving a very creditable account of himself—and cannot be classified as sponsible or unreliable habits. a lazybones, addicted to irre- So my advice to you is to pull in your claws and let your "in-laws" hoe their own row.

Notion Week Time to Become Well Groomed

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

ALL EYES will be on gapping skirts and blouses, misplaced hooks and eyes, and unkept knife-edged pleated skirts this week. It is National Notion Week—the time when women take inventory of themselves and their wardrobe to discover where they have slipped up on feminine niceties.

Notion departments make it a simple matter today for a woman to be dainty and immaculately groomed. They offer a score of gadgets as first aid devices to promote neatness and still keep in step with high style trends. Right now, there is a rallying to the new sloping shoulders everyone has been talking about.

New Type Bra's

Even dolman sleeves, the current version of the new shoulders, require protection—although they are cut deeper. Protection, especially at the forward front of the underarm section, is a necessity and little net braforms do the work. They are really bras with lightweight shields permanently attached and are ideal for such sleeves as sewing or pinning shields in them is impossible.

With this being the season for the "shirt and skirt" girl, men especially will be the ones to heave a sigh of relief for a gadget in honor of this newest fashion. The one thing men object to seeing is a skirt and shirt that miss connections. Two inconspicuous little strips of rubber that pin to the inside of skirt waistbands perform the trick. The surface of the rubber grips the shirt and holds it firmly in place.

To Preserve Pleats

To keep a shirt "lettuce-crisp," there are little airy light dress shields that have no rubber in them. They pin right into the shirt seams in the twinkling of an eye and preserve the garment's freshness. For the same crispness in knife-edged pleats, there are also waterproof skirt shields made of specially processed silk. They have little ribbons that tie around to hold them in place, and are light-weight but effective.

As the summer heat waves approach and the figure is less padded with clothes, it is more important than ever that a woman retain her form divine. With the lowered waistline and slim hips still in the spotlight, all eyes are turned toward figure control. There is a new type of lightweight rubber girdle designed to mold the figure to better proportions.

These rubber girdles and panties have detachable garters that are also adjustable. These innovations are very comfortable and ideal for exercising, working, sport or dancing. They are perforated for comfort and completely odorless. The rubber is shell pink and can be washed and dried immediately. The top fits snugly around the waist but will not roll over.

Why Streamline Furniture?

Pish-tosh for all this talk of streamlined furniture, remarked George Lamb, of the Mahogany Association. For, as he very aptly points out, streamlining is an idea meant to speed up a moving object by eliminating wind resistance. So it really doesn't make sense to worry about that when designing static things like furniture.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

At the Ball Game

She—Did you ever see so many people? You know I think it's so fine that every one can carry on this way with things as they are.

He—Hi, Dutch! Hi, Archie! Get in there and give it to 'em!

She—I wonder if the Tonsils are here. Marjorie said they were coming.

He—Come on now, boys! Play ball! Play ball!

She—George I do wish you'd look at that funny man back there in that plaid suit! The way he's yelling! Isn't he a scream!

He—Hi Joe. Say, see that guy? That's Joe DiMaggio!

She—George, please look quick at that funny man yelling! Wouldn't you think he'd be ashamed to make such a spectacle of himself?

He—Come on now boys. Eeee eeee—eeee! Give it to 'em!

She—Oh, I see the Ginns! I wish you'd look at her with her silver foxes! On a day like this! See—right through there——

He—There they go! Hurrah! Nice sock boy! Now for a home run!

She—George I WISH you'd look! Back there to the left! Walter Stepp with some woman!

He—What's the matter there! Come on Dutch! Give it to 'em! Attaboy!

She—Now who do you suppose that woman is with Walter Stepp?

He—Nice catch! Nice double! Eeeee—eeeee—eeee

She—You know I wouldn't think Walter'd have the nerve—in a place like this. . . . Of course, though, Grace was a fool ever to go to Bermuda——

He—He's out! He's out! Hey there! Down in front! . . . Now let's play ball!

She—Honestly that man in the plaid suit is simply precious! Wouldn't it be wonderful to be that uninhibited?

He—Whaddye mean back there Dutch is no good? Where do you get that stuff? . . . Say lemme tell you something—

He—Boo! Boo! Boo——ooo ——ooo! Throw him out! Booooo—

She—George! Please—

He—Oh Boy! Archie's up Hurray; Good boy Archie! He can do it!

She—Of all things! Guess WHO I see! Harriet Bobbin!

He—Tallyho boys! Tallyho!

She—You know Harriet simply loathes baseball. But she'd die or be here because everybody else is——

He—Boo-ooo! Get rid of that guy! Come on, now, play ball!

She—I think that woman with Walter Stepp is sort of cheap looking, don't you?

He—Two baggers! Two baggers! Down in front there!

She—Don't you love the way the catcher squats on his toes? That's exactly the exercise Ida Jean Kain gave for the hips.

He—Come on now Dutch! Give 'em all you've got! Attaboy!

She—It really is beautiful out here in the sunshine. Just think of all the Vitamin C everybody is getting.

He—Nice sock boy! Couldn't be better! Attaboy! Give it to 'em!

She—Look how beautiful the afternoon shadows are on the grass on the diamond—

He—Boo-ooo-ooo! He's no good! Put him out, Boo-ooo-ooo!

She—And see how that delicate little fringe of tree buds is etched against the sky—

He—He's safe! He's safe! Two hits and a stolen base!

She—George look quick!

He—That's a beaut! Good boy Buddy! Come on now, play ball!

She—George! There goes Walter Stepp out alone! That woman is with that other man!

He—He's home! Hurrah! Aw shut up you! Down in front!

He—Eeee—eeee—eeee! Hurray! Hurray! . . . Boo—ooo—ooo; Rah, Rah, rah'. Eee-eeee-eeee—Booooo! Rah! Boom! Bah!

Habit of Eating Between Meals Causes Overweight in Children

By Ida Jean Kain

ONE OF THE most engaging reducers I have ever encountered is a 5-year-old Philadelphian named Frankie who is in dead earnest about getting his weight down and who has perfectly matter-of-fact reasons for doing it. The first is, "So I can eat five pieces of bread at lunch," and the second, "I can't get my coat buttoned, and it's chilly."

I met Frankie at the famous St. Christopher's Hospital for Children, where his progress in slimming is looked upon with pride and joy. The dietitian tells me that when he has lost weight he is most talkative; and when he hasn't, he hangs his head and has very little to say.

Frankie is 45½ inches tall and weighs 74 pounds, 13 ounces. He has reduced from 81 pounds, 6 ounces, and still has a little way to go before getting down to the 48-pound mark considered normal for him. Since he weighed only seven and three-quarters pounds at birth and didn't have to give his calories a thought until the age of four when, over a span of a few months, he gained 30 pounds, his excess weight is clearly the result of a glandular disturbance.

Cutting Down the Calories

It is significant to note, however, that his weight is being normalized through control of his food habits, along with the administration of thyroid extract.

His breakfast used to be chocolate milk and three slices of bread and butter. For lunch he had two huge sandwiches and chocolate milk. And for a supper, meat, potatoes and bread. He liked potatoes, but no other vegetables. He loved rice pudding. Between meals he usually ate seven or eight double crackers.

But now that he is on a diet, he follows menus like these: Breakfast, orange juice, skim milk and one slice of whole wheat toast; lunch, a cheese sandwich, skim milk and an unsweetened fruit; dinner, what he calls "skinny part of the meat," vegetables and skim milk. He has codliver oil twice a day and nothng else between meals.

The doctor at this clinic is convinced that with children, as with adults, habits of eating are the main cause of overweight. The habit of eating between meals and the consumption of too much sugar and starch account for an amazingly high calorie intake.

New Slip Covers Pep Up House For Summer

FROM HOT and stuffy to cool and summery—that's the magical change a new slip cover works for a chair.

You can make a cover easily yourself the pin-on way, using your chair as a pattern, and the family budget won't even notice it!

A slip cover maybe of creamy chintz sprinkled with gay red strawberries and deep green leaves. Or you might like one of the lovely plain cottons; they come in every imaginable color, from cheery yellows to restful blues.

Here's the easy pin-on trick by which you can cover any chair or sofa. Simply remove the cushion and smooth a width of fabric down front of back and over seat, allowing a 4-inch tuck-in between them.

Pin along lines of the upholstery and cut 1½ inches outside pins for seams. In the same way you fit arms, sides and back. For the cusion and arm-front sections you might first cut paper patterns.

Now take off the pinned-up cover, baste and try on for adjustments. Your last step is to finish seams with binding or welting and add the flounce. Presto, a new chair!

Work slip-cover magic all through the house—on your sofa, wing chair, boudoir chairs. Our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," tells in detail how to estimate material, cut, fit and finish covers in professional style. Advises on fabrics, styles, trimmings.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Washingtonians Seek Relief As Scorching Sun Beats Down

HEAT of 94 degrees drove Washingtonians to the Potomac River banks yesterday in crowds the Park Police only could describe "as tremendous."

Some lay in the shade of trees and shrubs, others drove around the Tidal Basin in their automobiles until traffic was estimated to be more congested than on Sunday a week ago when the first sight of cherry blossoms brought record-breaking crowds to the park.

IN THE great crowds were hundreds of picknickers, bicyclists, golfers, men apparently comfortable while playing baseball in the middle of the hot afternoon, and, farther up the river, swimmers.

River fans have been afforded a new sport, pedal-boating. The Welfare and Recreational Association of Public Buildings and Grounds said these innovations, popular elsewhere, can be had on the C. & O. Canal at Great Falls, Md. Rowboats and canoes also are available. The parking space adjacent to the recreation area is being enlarged there and the association will operate a refreshment stand.

ELSEWHERE Washingtonians sought cool retreats, favoring particularly the deeply shaded Zoo. Attendants there estimated the visitors at 50,000, the largest this season.

The city crowds trying to escape the heat and the crowds of tourists still coming in to see the cherry blossoms overtaxed the Fourteenth Street Bridge yesterday, causing a long tie-up.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Catfish Has 15 Lives

Nashville Tenn., April 20 (AP).—Apologies were in order today to 14 fishermen who had told about the big one that got away. Marcell Wackenie, fishing in Indian Lake, pulled in a large spoonbill catfish that had 14 hooks in its mouth.

Baby Grows Fast

Tampa, Fla., April 20 (AP).—A carnival prepared to leave winter quarters today. When the fat lady, "Baby Ruth," found she had put on so much weight she couldn't get through the door of the train. Mechanics were called to widen the door so "Baby Ruth," who weighs 800 as against 725 last year, could squeeze through.

Census Showed 821,840 Jobs Under Merit

On January 1 a census showed that 821,840 Federal jobs were under Civil Service and that 297,800 positions were outside the merit system. The figure of non-civil service jobs covers Cabinet members and Ambassadors to per diem laborers and charwomen. The President's orders making the Ramspeck Act effective are expected to cover, at least temporarily, about 200,000 additional jobs under merit. Civil Service officials estimate, however, that between 125,000 and 150,000 positions ultimately will be brought under merit by the orders. The remaining jobs have or will be exempted either by the President, Congress, or the commission itself.

Congress exempted thousands of jobs when it passed the Ramspeck Act. WPA's 22,000 administrative employes and 18,320 employes at TVA were exempted from civil service, along with thousands of Presidential appointees and assistant United States district attorneys. The commission itself has more than 40,000 exempted jobs in what is known as its schedules "A" and "B".

A decision, not yet official, has ruled out all employes of the Federal Reserve System and the Federal Land Banks from being brought under Civil Service by the Ramspeck Act. The banks aren't "wholly Government owned," as required by the act. The Foreign Service Division of the State Department has a merit system of its own for its approximately 4,000 employes who won't be effected by the Presidential orders.

The recent report of the Reed Commttee urged that all Federal jobs except those of a "policy-making character" be brought under merit. The committee said it believed that the Federal Bureau of Investigation's 5,000 employes should be brought under Civil Service "but not at this time of national emergency." In view of this recommendation and the friendly attitude of Congress toward the FBI, it's entirely possible that the Civil Service Commission will place FBI jobs, except fingerprint classifiers, in its schedule A. The classifiers are already under Civil Service Agriculture has 53,796 jobs outside civil service, the largest number of any department. Roughly 15,000 are seasonal and part-time employes who no doubt would continue to be exempted. Three large Agriculture bureaus that would be affected by the order are Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Surplus Marketing Administration and Federal Crop Insurance.

War has 52,219 non-Civil Service jobs. Like Agriculture, thousands of these are laborers on rivers and harbors and they probably will be continued in non-Civil Service jobs. Post Office has more than 4,100 employes outside Civil Service. Many are special delivery messengers who legally aren't Federal employes under an Attorney General's ruling, and who, therefore, can't be brought under Civil Service. Navy has more than 5,000 part-time laborers who probably will not be affected by the order, and there is no question that the several hundred dollar-a-year and WOC appointees in defense agencies won't have to qualify through Civil Service.

The agencies where the impact of the Presidential order will strike effectively are FHA, RFC, HOLC, and Export-Import Bank, where about 20,000 jobs will be covered under Civil Service. Between 35,000 and 40,000 employes will be affected at Agriculture. At Treasury, about 15,000, mainly employes in Internal Revenue and in the Divisions of Disbursements and Accounts and Deposits. PWA employes and employes at USHA making more than $1,960 also will be covered.

There isn't a single department or agency that the Presidential order won't affect in some way. Scientists, administrators, attorneys and other professional personnel generally exempted from civil service will be brought under merit in all departments on January 1 under the orders.

R.; Winifred Louise McQuillan, junior national chaplain, and Vollie Jean Irvine

Delegates to the annual convention of the Children of the American Revolution, which convened here Friday, devoted the third day of their program to a pilgrimage to historic shrines in nearby Virginia yesterday, when approximately 200 members, accompanied by senior members of the D. A. R., visited historic Christ Church and the Old Presbyterian Meeting House in Alexandria, and the tombs of George and Martha Washington at Mount Vernon.

At Christ Church, where Washington and Gen. Robert E. Lee once worshipped, the delegates attended a 45-minute service. At the Presbyterian Meeting House, they placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the Revolutionary War, while at Mount Vernon wreaths were laid on the tombs of George and Martha Washington.

The Christ Church service, conducted by the Rev. Edward R. Welles, rector, was marked by brief tributes to officers and members of the C. A. R. The tribute to the membership was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Welles, to Mrs. Aimee E. Powell, honorary national vice president, by Mrs. Thaddeus Jones, national treasurer, and to the senior presidents of the organization by Mrs. Herbert Patterson, State president of North Carolina.

Honoring deceased members of the C. A. R. and its parent organization, flowers also were placed in a wreath which later was laid on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the Revolutionary War. The floral presentations were made at the altar by members of the society.

At the Old Presbyterian Meeting House, the wreath was placed on the Unknown Soldier's tomb by Patricia Goodwin and Sara Pardee, of the Jane Parks McDowell Society of North Carolina. The program included a prayer by Winifred McQuillan, national junior chaplain, of New Jersey; a brief history of the Unknown Soldier's tomb by Vollie Jean Irvine, of Texas, and reading of the inscription on the tomb by James C. Suttie, jr., of Nebraska.

At Mount Vernon, a wreath was placed on George Washington's tomb by Margaret Portwood, Tennessee junior State president, and on Martha Washington's tomb by Charlotte Burr, of Connecticut.

The delegation was headed by its newly elected president, William Berner, of East Orange, N. J., and included representatives from 48 States.

Church to Show Films of R. A. F.

Moving pictures of the Royal Air Force and convoy action, Scottish bagpipe music and a program by the Kensington Village Singers will be presented tonight at 8 in Hamlin Memorial Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest.

Proceeds will benefit a fund for the purchase of a mobile canteen to aid bombed districts of Britain. The show and canteen are being sponsored by the St. Andrews Society of Washington.

1812 Group to Meet

The District Society of the War of 1812 will hold its forty-fifth birthday dinner and meeting in the Army and Navy Club tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

Truck Kills Boy; Soldier Fatally Hurt

D. C. Traffic Toll Rises to 26; Four Others Injured In Auto Accidents

An 8-year-old boy was fatally injured by a truck yesterday, his death bringing the District traffic toll for 1941 to 26, as compared with 17 at this time last year. He is Leon Thomas, of 1566 Thirty-third Street Northwest.

The lad sustained a fractured jaw, fractured skull and a shattered hip when he was crushed under the vehicle in the 3300 block of M Street Northwest. Police said the truck was operated by William S. Hart, 18, of Brookmont, Md.

Private Alex Gyorfi, 25, of Brainards, N. J., a soldier in the Fifth Engineers, Fort Belvoir, was fatally injured Saturday night when he was struck by an automobile on the Richmond Highway 2 miles south of Accotink, Va. John Griffith, of Paulsboro, N. J., driver of the automobile, was exonerated at a hearing before Dr. T. B. McCord, Fairfax County coroner.

One person was under treatment for brain concussion in Prince Frederick (Md.) Hospital after a collision on Bayside Road 1 mile south of Randle Cliffs, Calvert County, Md. He was identified as Bernard Patterson, 18, of North Beach, Md. William K. McWilliams, of North Beach, said by police to have been driving the automobile in which Patterson was riding, suffered minor injuries.

In Washington Harriet Penfold, 2½, of 5811 Fifth Street Northwest, sustained severe lacerations of the scalp and a possible skull fracture when she was struck by an automobile in front of her home. Police said the automobile was operated by John D. Holman, 19, of 5504 Fifth Street Northwest.

Chergue C. Schilling, 38, of the Bellevue Hotel, received lacerations of the scalp and a possible skull fracture when he was struck by an automobile at North Capitol and K Streets. The automobile, police reported, was operated by John W. Booknight, colored, 33, of 1040 Sixth Street Northeast.

Pact Outlawing War Still Effective, Finch Asserts

Evidence that the Pact of Paris outlawing war still is effective is found in the fact that "so-called aggressor nations" have evaded a charge of its violation by engaging in a series of "bootleg wars," George A. Finch, secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, said in his annual report, released yesterday.

"In the period during which the endowment has been active, from the close of the World War to the present time," he said, "there has been a more sustained and encouraging development in the processes of international organization for the maintenance of peace and the prevention of war than in any other period of history."

Among instruments for the furtherance of peace, Finch named the League of Nations and the Permanent Court of International Justice during their active lives; the International Labor Organizations and the Pact of Paris itself.

Safety Plaque Will Be Given D. C. Tonight

Washington, together with six other cities and four States, will receive official recognition tonight for its 1940 accident prevention program.

District officials will receive a plaque declaring that Washington was the Nation's safest city of more than 500,000 population at the annual award banquet of the National Safety Council, to be held at 7:30 p. m. at the Mayflower.

Also on hand will be representatives of Connecticut, Oklahoma, Minnesota, Oregon, Dallas, Kansas City, Chattanooga, Lakewood, Ohio; Watertown, N. Y., and La Grange, Ill., which also made record contributions to accident prevention last year.

Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio, who as Mayor of Cleveland led his city in taking first prize in 1938 and 1939, will be the principal speaker.

The National Safety Council's analysis of Washington's winning record points out that last year's 79 fatalities were eight fewer than the previous year, giving it the lowest death rate per population among the Nation's 14 largest cities.

The Franklin Sherman High School Dramatic Club of McLean, Va., will present its final performance this season, entitled "Hot Water," at 8 tonight in the school auditorium.

New Pastor Greeted at 9th Street Church

Congregation Starts Golden Jubilee By Welcoming Dr. Carroll Roberts

Historic Ninth Street Christian Church inaugurated its golden jubilee celebration yesterday by welcoming a new pastor.

Delivering his first sermon at Ninth and Streets Northeast, Dr. Carroll C. Roberts used the same sermon theme as did the late Rev. E. B. Bagby when he launched the congregation back in the 90's. It was "Lord, We Believe."

Earlier, in presenting Dr. Roberts to his new flock, Arthur G. Bishop, lay official, read a leter of congratulation on the anniversary from Mrs. E. B. Bagby, widow of the church's founder. The Rev. Mr. Bagby, who also helped found Columbia Heights Christian congregation and other churches, was an active Christian Endeavor organizer. An Endeavor Society at the Columbia Heights Church is named for him.

At 7:30 a. m., Dr. Roberts lead a memorial service for members who died during the 50 years. The church school also marked the occasion with special rites. Other services were held last night.

The anniversary celebration will be continued this week, beginning tonight with a "gay nineties" play, "Who Remembers?" A musical program under the direction of Joseph O. Harrison and featuring three choirs and an orchestra, is slated for Wednesday night. Friday will be "Young People's Night" with a "Spirit of '41" keynote.

Dr. Roberts comes to Ninth Street Church, one of the largest and most active congregations in the city, after a successful ministry at the Hanover Avenue Christian Church in Richmond, Va. He is married and has two children.

Joe Cook Brings Recipes For Earle and 'Cook Book'

Famous Comic Arrives Today on Double Duty; Modern Ireland Pictured in Technicolor; This, That and the Other About the Theater

BELL

Joe is down ahead of time for a double purpose. Not only is he anxious to whip his "Daffy-Dills," from the recent production of "It Happens on Ice," into shape for the Earle goings-on, but one surmises that he has in the back of his mind something about the production of his musical biography, "Cook Book," on the fire out at Catholic University, under the managerial direction of Father Hartke, director of the Speech and Drama Department of that eminent institution of higher learning.

Taking time by the fetlock, or whatever it is you take time by, arrangements have been made by the Warner high command to fete the protege of the Evansville, Ind., firehouses, at luncheon tomorrow. Father Hartke and several of the boys and girls of C. U., who have had a finger in the preparation of "Cook Book," also will be on hand, so I am told.

It would be interesting to know precisely when and where all this gay busines is coming off, but that cannot be determined until it is made sure whether Joe is stopping at a hotel or in a tent, or a trailer, or something, down at the tourist camp. We're not especially worried, because wherever it is, it is sure to be fun. A couple of Hoosiers always can dig up a laugh, even if at their own expense. This will be at the Warner Brothers' expense, so what can one lose?

Incidentally, those "Daffy-Dills" Joe is bringing to town with him include Sir Geoffrey Hale, Will Ritchie, Charles Senna—an old wheelhorse of the Cook enterprises—Gene Winchester, who has nothing to do with Mr. Benny; the Juggling Deweys and Andy McBann. And since the thing has come up, Joe used to be a bit of a juggler himself—and a pretty good one. That's what broke him into the theater game, if that is what it is, via amateur nights.

The Ireland of Today, in Technicolor

There is a new sort of picture of Ireland being shown locally this week and one of such merit as to deserve attention. Father T. N. McCarthy is presenting "Here Is Ireland." out in St. Ann's Hall, 4404 Wisconsin Avenue, through Saturday. This Pat Stanton Technicolor production is none of your run-of-the-mine Irish "scenics." It gets away from the conventional Eire of tumbledown shacks and barren moors and peat bogs, and shows the Emerald Isle as it is today—a thriving, modern, up-to-the-minute country, deserving something beyond the sympathy that usually accrues to the picturization of penury. Frank Aiken, War Minister of Eire, appears in the film and hopes some time to see it. He hasn't as yet.

Dots and Dashes

The big Variety Club Golf Tournament, at the national convention, will be held on Saturday, May 17 . . . If you think your clubs can put our club on top, entries should be made at once with Harry Brown . . . And there is a dark horse in there, too . . . David Battle, one of Tent No. 11's mess boys, made a hole-in-one the other day out at the Bennings Course, Twenty-sixth and Bennings Road, on something like 175 yards. . . . It was only his second time out this season . . . For the nineteenth consecutive year, the Security Club of the American Security and Trust Co., is up with an annual spring play . . . It will be "One Mad Night," at Roosevelt High School Auditorium, on Tuesday, April 29 . . . Richard Whorf, admirable actor and very fair scene designer, is the latest Broadwayite to be proselyted from the footlights to the cinema by the Warner Brothers . . . Now on tour with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night," Whorf will report to the Burbank studio some time in May . . . Jerome Thor, Varvara Thery, Victor Christian, Henry Levin, Jack Mylong-Muenz, Victor Thorley, Herbert Berghof and Harald Bromley are the latest recruits for the cast of "Somewhere in France," coming into the National on April 28.

Another-One-for-"Dr. I. Q." Note

In Hollywood

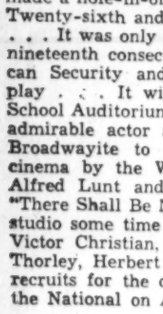
Hollywood, April 20.

John Garfield is loving the part of Goff, the relentless petty racketeer in "Gentle People."

Most actors would shy away from the character as being too unsympathetic, but Garfield says he's more than a character—he's a trend. "Goff is a real heel. He terrorizes and beats two nice old men. He is savage, unregenerate, cruel. He swindles money out of a father to ruin his daughter. But if pictures show life, then they should show rats like Goff. Life isn't easy—it's terrifying. Goffs, as individuals and nations, are terrorizing humanity today. The two old men in the picture say, "We're minding our own business; let us alone!" But who is being left alone in the world today?" says Garfield.



HOPPER

And speaking of villains, Joseph Schildkraut, who for my money is about the "suavest" boy around these diggin's, is doing a likeable gambler in "The Parson of Panamint." After he's been slapped around, it's nice to see him in his stride again. "Instead of doing the vicious, neurotic type of villain, as in "Ranger of Fortune," Joe says, "I'm doing a loveable gambler—the kind of guy who won't go to church, but sends money to it anonymously." He runs the biggest joint in town, yet is willing to turn it over for a make-shift church. I'm waiting for Schildkraut to get another part like Dreyfuss, which brought him an academy award. That's the kind of part he really goes to town on.

Philip Reed was doing a scene with Dottie Lamour in "Aloma of the South Seas" when the little monkey working with Dot grew jealous and started pelting him with peanuts. "Gosh!" said Reed. "Things sure are getting tough in Hollywood when the monkeys throw peanuts to the actors!"

I found Walter Huston having the time of his life playing the devil in "The Devil and Daniel Webster." Why, Walter," I said, "you're making the devil a very charming fellow." "Well," said he, "the devil may be pretty bad, but he's certainly a lot of fun."

Pat Morison and Wynn Rocamora were the center of all eyes at Rancho Grande, where they knocked off a mean rumba. And Martha O'Driscoll and Richard Dennin requested "Because of You" three times, at the same spot.

Brian Donlevy has won a six-year battle with the powers that be. After six years of boos and hisses, he'll be in "Birth of the Blues" as Bing Crosby's comedy rival for Mary Martin's affections. Brian insists he's a comedian at heart, but boy!—he'd better be funny. His fans have learned to love him "bad!"

Milton Berle has been lecturing in Warren Scott's class at U. S. C. on comedy technique. Now he's threatening to open his own "School for Comedy"—"In response to hundreds of requests (well ONE, anyway!)" says Milt.

Miriam Hopkins returns here in May. She writes, "I'm going to the circus, then on to Norman Bel Geddes' big party. You know, a year ago he got $5,000,000 to streamline it—the circus, silly, not the party. But the elephants remained the same. Not even for Geddes would they change their shape." En route home, Miriam picks up her son Michael in Arizona, and then moves on to the hilltop Jock Whitney has been occupying during her absence. Says Miriam, "I'm going to prepare for that big picture my fortune teller says I'm going to make!"

That 'Devil' Carries On At Keith's

When the dyspeptic "richest man in the world," slightly piqued by having been burned in effigy by the employes of a department store he didn't even remember that he owned, decides to become a clerk in his own establishment to find out what the rumpus is all about, there is apt to be the devil to pay, not only in the case of Miss Jones, but all the others with a hand in the sinister affront.

That, approximately, is what comes off in "The Devil and Miss Jones," now in its second week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. The "devil," in the person of that admirable veteran of stage and screen, Charles Coburn—he's had a round half-century of it in both media—and "Miss Jones," in all of the pertness of Jean Arthur, strike it off rather well, everything considered. As a matter of fact, these two make of "The Devil and Miss Jones" one of the most engaging comedy dramas of the season. It is one of those ingratiating things that by some miracle seem to evade most of the pitfalls of "overdoing" that nullify so many attempts at gay pretending. There is nothing malicious in the picture, but there is a great deal that is intensely human, frivolously appealing and abundantly amusing.

This can not all be attributed to Mr. Coburn and Miss Arthur. They are splendidly assisted by Robert Cummings, Spring Byington, Edmund Gwenn, Walter Kingsford, Montagu Love, Charles Waldron, Richard Carle, Edwin Maxwell, Florence Bates, S. Z. Sakall, William Demarest and a long list of others.

The nicely assorted supplementary subjects also are being held over with a feature that deservedly has the Capital agog or two.

Trans-Lux

With vivid pictures of the capture of Tobruk and reminders from England of the holocaust being waged on the British Isles, the news section of the current program at the Trans-Lux Theater brings in contrast our Nation's tribute to Easter.

Pan-American Day brings the celebration of unity of the Americas, with sparkling gatherings in Havana and New York City, and a pledge of mutual allegiance by the Presidents of Colombia and Venezuela. Brazil is shown speeding up her aviation program as Japan signs her nonaggression pact with Russia.

In our own country defense activities take top round of the news ladder with shipyards going full speed; new plastic plywood plane tested in New Jersey; spectacular shots of Uncle Sam's new parachutists in single and mass jump drills; and from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., combined horse and mechanized cavalry in businesslike review. In California, the Army Medical Corps goes into training, while in Corpus Christie, Tex., the newest naval base is completed far ahead of schedule. In New York, William Martin, head of the Stock Exchange, is drafted into the Army and, on the West Coast, James Roosevelt weds Romelle Schneider.

Opening baseball games bring to the screen the best pictures in several years. The games covered include Washington, with the President pitching the first ball; Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers, at Brooklyn; Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals, at Cincinnati.

"Americans All," a "March of Time," is particularly timely and interesting. Just for fun, the "Our Gang" kiddies are in the comedy spot with "Goin' Fishin'." The color cartoon is out of the ordinary.

Gayety

Georgia Sothern, who has just returned from a successful tour of the West, is the featured attraction of this week's revue at the Gayety.

Ranking with such favorites as Ann Corio, Hinda Wassau and Margie Hart, Miss Sothern's work in the current bill does much to enhance her position among the lovely sirens who appear here. Rated as one of the most sensational and daring dancers in burlesque, Georgia offers several numbers which rank among her best.

Max Furman, Billy Ainsley and Mac Dennison, a trio of veteran funsters, headline in the comedy sector, and a funny lot they are. Furman's antics are unusually witty, while Dennison (he joins the Army in a few weeks) gives a smashing farewell performance. Alma Maiben and Murray Briscoe render invaluable aid to the many comedy sequences in which they appear.

Aside from the terrific Miss Sothern, are such charmers as Nadine Marsh, Mitzi Montez and Lamee Lane. Incidentally, Miss Montez's musical specialities are rousingly rendered. One of the highlights on the bill is the dancing of sepia Otto Eason. This lad, with the aid of roller skates, gives a dance exhibition that all but "stops" the show.

The settings and lighting of the current show are miles above par, particularly the patriotic number coming just before intermission.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, April 20.

SOCIAL NOTES: In the elevator at the Hotel Ambassador, Tilly Losch saw a tall man she remembered having met in Washington. He bowed his head, in acknowledgment, and Miss Losch said, "How do you do? The last time we met, Mr. Hopkins, was at the home of" . . . and she mentioned the name of a young lady . . . "I'm not Mr. Hopkins," the man stated . . . "Oh, I'm so sorry," said Miss Losch. "I thought you were Harry Hopkins" . . . "I'm the former Governor of Michigan," was the reply, as the elevator went up to the top floor, down to the bottom, and up again, "the former Attorney General, and now I'm Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. My Name is Frank Murphy."

TRAVEL DEPT.: Miss Losch will return to England before this summer, to join her husband, the Count of Carnarvon. She already has purchased the one item he wanted her to bring back—an item which cannot be purchased in all England. . . . Carnarvon, whose father unearthed the wealth of King Tut, and whose house is so large that 100 refugees now live in the rooms upstairs, asked his wife to bring back from America a roll of dental floss.

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT: Wendell Willkie diner Friday at the Waldorf's Sert Room. Xavier Cugat was introduced to him, and suggested that Willkie visit Mexico. "Our people would love you, Mr. Willkie," Cugat assured . . . "Well, I may go there soon," Willkie replied, "but I must remain in New York for a while. I just started on a new job yesterday."

TAX DEPARTMENT: Eleanor Roosevelt was at a luncheon party in Florida, during her stay there, and listened to a discussion of high taxation. All those present agreed that America's citizens in these days have no hesitancy in paying higher rates of taxation, to raise money for defense purposes . . . "I used to think," said Mrs. Roosevelt, "that higher taxes was an incentive for people to work harder. My children told me that wasn't true."

FOREIGN DISPATCH: James Minifie, the Herald Tribune's London correspondent, who was wounded during Wednesday's bombardment, once made it uncomfortable—but not enough—for a Fascist chieftain. In Rome, last year, Minifie met Vincent Sheean—and, late at night, called the Hotel Excelsior, where Sheean was living. He told the operator: "Give me Sheean's room"—and when he heard a response, Minifie asked: "Is that you, Sheean?". . . . "No," the voice barked. "This is Ciano."

HEALTH DEPARTMENT: Supreme Court Justice Douglas, who was chairman of the SEC before Jerome Frank succeeded him in that post, will do the swearing-in when Frank goes to the Circuit Court of Appeals here . . . Frank now is positive that his health will permit him to assume the strenuous judicial post. At the SEC quarters in Washington, he had suddenly clutched at his heart, and fell off his chair, complaining of a painful attack . . . His aides hurled water in his face to revive him, lifted him to a couch, tore off his coat and vest, and there—between his vest and his shirt—they found the lighted cigarette which had dropped there.

POLITICS: Hildegarde went to Ctiy Hall to open the drive for the Foster Parents' Plan to Aid War Children . . . She visited Newbold Morris, acting mayor, who took her into a room where all the boro presidents were drawing pencil lines through a sheaf of documents . . . "Working on the budget?" Morris asked them. They nodded. "Hildegarde's come to make you cut into your personal budgets," Morris explained . . . The officials dropped their coins into the singer's coin box, and then returned to the budget of the City of New York.

SCHOOL DEPT.: Helen O'Connell, vocalist of Jimmy Dorsey's band, was notified of her designation as "Sweetheart of Harvard." She wired her acceptance to the senior class at Harvard, and then told Dorsey the news. . . . "How can you be the Sweetheart of Harvard?" Dorsey asked her, "when your boy friend is Jimmy Blumenstock, the football star of Fordham?". . . . "Oh, that's easy," Helen explained. "I like Harvard—but I looooooovvvvvv Fordham."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Jules Romain, the French writer, lives in a house where Stella Roman, of the Metropolitan Opera, has her apartment. When Romain's phone callers aren't explicit enough, and Miss Roman's telephone rings instead.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 20 (INS).—Franchot Tone today put his John Hancock on a contract to play the male lead in "I, James Lewis," for Frank Lloyd. I was pretty sure that Franchot would sign because "Mutiny on the Bounty" was a Lloyd production and "I, James Lewis" will have something of the same feeling of the famed "Bounty." "I, James Lewis," based on Gilbert Gabriel's book, tells of the fur trade carried on in 1810 in Oregon and Washington. Lewis is one of the members of the ship owned by John Jacob Astor, founder of the Astor fortune.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Walter Brennan for the first time will be seen in a Charles Laughton-Capt. Bligh type of role—a tough hombre. John Carroll, M.-G.-M.'s pride and joy, is being sought for the role of the French Canadian and today Frank was trying to borrow Priscilla Lane from Warners.

The Navy has sent out official word that Douglas Fairbanks, jr., has been made a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Naval Reserve. Young Doug, who is on his way to South America as diplomatic envoy, will receive this word en route. He dropped me a little note just before he left to say that he will visit eight countries and is scheduled for 15 speeches which, he says, "makes me very wobbly in the knees."

What a hubbub there was years ago when Constance Bennett signed her famous $30,000-a-week contract for "King Rubber," a Warner picture. So it's really interesting to learn that the suave Connie is returning to that lot for "King Rubber." The inside of that fabulous deal of five years ago was that Connie was getting about $150,000 for the picture—but an ambitious press agent broke it down into a weekly salary. Connie never did get through answering the begging letters.

The life of 11-year-old Ruben Reyes will be changed by the visit of David O. Selznick and the movie stars to Guadalajara, Mexico. Ruben sings like an angel. David was so enchanted with the little fellow that he is arranging to bring him to Hollywood. Tutors will teach Ruben to speak English and his golden voice will be protected and then David will make a picture with him.

You'll see many new faces on the screen this coming year, because there just aren't enough big stars to appear in all the pictures planned for 1941. Michael Ames, for example, has been brought on from New York and is being tested at Warners for the role of Parris in "King's Row." He looks like Tyrone Power and has had considerable stage experience.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: What a lovely bride Deanna Durbin was in her gown of ivory satin with a madonna halo of matching lace. The floral decorations at the church were all white blossoms—so fitting for young love like Deanna's and Vaughn's; the newlywed James Roosevelts lunching at the Beverly Derby with her mother before they flew to San Francisco.

John Garfield planes to New York to be with his father who is seriously ill. His wife and baby follow on the train; Cobina Wright, jr., and John Carroll an ice-capades duet. Everyone who wasn't at the Durbin-Paul wedding was at the ice show, including the Bing Crosbys, Dorothy Lamour and Greg Bautzer and the Stu Erwins; there is talk that Mary Lou Dix and Al Newman are no longer seeing eye to eye; Anne Shirley celebrated her twenty-second birthday at Ciro's with her favorite actor and severest critic, John Payne; Tim Durant also playing host at the same place to the Spencer Tracys, the Charles Feldmans, Jean Gabin, Patricia Morison and Franchot Tone. Cooks night out also brought out the Mervyn Leroys, the Jack Bennys and the Robert Taylors.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Armenians In D. C. Hold Easter Mass

Resplendent in his gold and purple mitre and cope, the white-bearded Archbishop Karakin Hovsepian, of New York City, prelate of the Armenian Church in the Americas, yesterday gave his Easter blessing to local adherents of that faith.

Looking like an ancient Biblical patriarch as he stood before the altar of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, the septuagenarian ecclesiastic conducted the Armenian Easter Communion mass with the ancient Eastern Church rites, his voice ringing out the old Gregorian chant.

On his right in the choir loft were the choristers—men and women in white red-bordered gowns with red and white crosses on the back, the women's heads covered with the koghs, or white veils. In one part of the service, while Organist Mary Kalayjian played the accompaniment, the choir and congregation chanted:

"Let us pray with an unanimous song, Christ the King of Glory, who for our sake was incarnate of the Holy Virgin, and endured suffering upon the Cross. Let us praise with an unanimous song Him who consented to be in the grave three days, and rose from death. Let us praise with an unanimous song Him who mightily burst the gates of hell, and has clothed His Church with Divine majesty." B. Kurkjian was choir director.

Later in the service, the archbishop unrolled a 22 by 20 inch official paper—his Easter encyclical to his followers in North and South America. While two altar boys, Edward Bastekian, 12, and Harry Khosrofian, 16, held the ends of the paper, the prelate read the message. It stressed the significance of Jesus' resurrection.

As the choristers stood in the church alcove, preparing to march into the sanctuary, one singer explained to The Post that in the Armenian Church the singers must undergo a ceremony of ordination for their positions. The Armenian liturgy is said to be one of the most beautiful in the world.

Assisting Archbishop Hovsepian in the services was Deacon Harturian, who has been affiliated with the local Armenian group since its founding five years ago. They worship once monthly either at St. Johns or St. Thomas Episcopal Church. Armenians either celebrate Easter on the same date as the Western Church or in the 40-day period afterward.

Rev. Reuzilian Attends

Among those in the congregation yesterday afternoon was the Rev. R. Reuzilian, pastor of the Armenian Presbyterian congregation here, which also worships on Sundays in St. Johns parish hall.

Climaxing the Easter celebration for the local Armenians, a dinner was staged at the Roger Smith Hotel, where greetings were extended by Archbishop Hovsepien, Dr. M. M. Dolmage, president of the board of trustees of the local Armenian Church; Mrs. Henry Maranian, president of the Ladies Aid Society, and others.

The Archbishop is spending a week in the city, and expects to do considerable research work on ancient manuscripts. He has written several books on the subject.

Church Here Pays Tribute To Lord Stamp

Lord Stamp's Washington church honored his memory at yesterday's services.

At Foundry Methodist Church, where the English economist worshiped on several visits here, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris paid lofty tribute to his fellow-Methodist and personal friend, who was killed by a Nazi bomb several days ago. Lady Stamp and a son also were killed.

Stepping down from his pulpit to the front of the chancel, Dr. Harris told his congregation that "in England, America and the rest of the world, there is a vacant place in the sky because of the deaths of Lord and Lady Stamp."

Calling them "gentle victims of the Nazi barbarity," Dr. Harris spoke of Lady Stamp's "extraordinary charm and talent, and great influence in her own right."

Of Lord Stamp, in whose home he was a guest in the summer of 1939, Dr. Harris said:

"In my judgment he was one of the greatest men of our age. A great thinker, a great lecturer-writer, a great business executive, a great economist, a great friend and a great Christian."

Dr. Harris also recalled that Lord Stamp, known as a great Methodist lay preacher, had written to him recently regretting that the war had interrupted his plans for raising funds to help finance the new chancel at Foundry Church. It was to represent a gift of English Christians to American Christians.

Postoffice Guard Held on Charge Of Shooting at Wife

Joseph M. Fant, 53, a Postoffice Department guard, was held at Tenth Precinct Station last night on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon after he fired one wild shot, police said, at his wife and daughter in their home, 3221 Mount Pleasant Street Northwest.

Police said Fant approached his wife shortly after an argument, brandishing a .38-caliber pistol. He fired, they said, just as their 18-year-old daughter, Barbara, leaped in front of her mother. The bullet went through a kitchen wall and lodged on a window sill in the bathroom after breaking the glass.

Ethel Callahan, 22, of 3742 First Street Southeast, was shot in the left leg when a .22-caliber rifle being cleaned by a friend, Charles Secrist, 26, in his home at 1312 S Street Southeast, was accidentally discharged. She was taken to Providence Hospital by Secrist.

Also at Providence was Charles William Owens, colored, 29, of 322 Third Street Southwest, who was shot four times in the legs by another colored man as they walked in the 400 block of Third Street. Police said Owens' assailant, who escaped, dropped back as they walked and fire on Owens from behind.

Spring's First Catch of Fish Stories Make the Papers

By Gladwin Hill

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, April 2.—Your dizzy digest this week leads off with the first spring crop of fish stories. If you don't believe any of them, send in a box-top and we'll send you back an affidavit, and the box-top.

It seems that a fisherman down in Conway, N. C., hooked as his initial catch of the year an otter. . . . A Salisbury, N. C., angler tried liver for bait, and when he wasn't looking, hooked his own dog. . . .

An Oregon City, Oreg., fisherman flipped his catch ashore and lost it—and later discovered that it had flopped right into his creel. . . . And a Herrin, Ill., man caught a fish with a shovel—out of a pile of sand just dredged from the Ohio River. You should have seen the dredge that got away.

Postoffice Department: Citizens of Fairbanks, Ind., tired of being mixed up with a half-dozen other Fairbankses, asked to change their name to Fairbanks, jr. . . . And a Buffalo woman who a few months ago wrote a friend in Holland, N. Y., got the letter back, it having been routed meanwhile to the Netherlands. . . .

Animal Antics: A hen in Woodruff, N. C., adopted a litter of kittens. . . . And a cat in Danville, Va., adopted a mouse. No mice adopted anything.

Municipal Monkeyshines: . . . The citizens of Easton, Ill., voted in favor of installing a waterworks system, but against the money to install one . . . East St. Louis, Ill., had to fire its dog catcher, because he nailed 1,500 dogs in a month, at $1 a dog, and it was bankrupting the town . . . .

Slap-happy happenings hither and thither:

Two Rhinelander (Wis.) highway workers got stuck in a truck on a road they had just posted as impassable . . . a Rocky Mount (N. C.) telegraph boy went to sleep on a streamlined train and woke up in Jacksonville, Fla. . . .

A streamlined train that goes through Tifton, Ga., started regularly turning on a Tifton woman's electric stove and buzzing a signal on the Tifton telephone exchange . . . and Milwaukee streetcars jolted the countryside so, an alderman complained, that they jarred a woman bystander's false teeth right out . . . a Berlin (Md.) woman's false teeth started coming out, but it wasn't trolley cars—at the age of 68, she had started cutting more teeth. . . .

And after a Boy Scout official in Rock Island, Ill., used up two matches vainly trying to light a fire, he discovered the paper he was using was asbestos.

3 Escaped Nazis Reported Dead

Port Arthur, Ontario, April 20 (AP). Three of 28 escaped German war prisoners were reported dead tonight as searching parties pushed through unsettled countryside in snow-swept northwest Ontario seeking the nine remaining at large.

It was announced officially at Ottawa earlier tonight that 16 of the escaped prisoners, all believed to be noncommissioned members of the Nazi air force, were in custody. The men escaped from a nothwestern Ontario internment camp last Friday by tunneling their way out after leaving "dummies" in their beds.

Liberties Union Protests Inquiries On U. S. Workers

The American Civil Liberties Union yesterday voiced opposition to a provision in a Justice Department appropriations bill which calls for an FBI investigation of Federal employes.

In a letter to Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, Appropriations Committee chairman, the civil liberties organization urged him to hold a public hearing on the bill, which has already been adopted by the House.

The protest, signed by Dr. John Haynes Holmes, chairman of the board; Arthur Garfield Hays, general counsel, and Roger N. Baldwin, director, declared that the measure would make the FBI "virtually a political police."

They charged that inquiry would result in "intimidation, false accusations, unfounded suspicions and inevitable loss of morale of Federal employes."

Bureaucracy Grows

By Roger W. Babson

Much of It Seen Unjustified

If any reader believes that the Administration has set aside its social reforms he is sadly mistaken. Washington may give the impression that it is working hand in hand with manufacturers on the defense program. Certainly, we have a right to expect that. In this period of national emergency personal ambitions would be set aside.

Our leaders in Washington surely should bury the hatchet of hate for business. If anything will save England, Canada, and this country, it will be an "all-out" schedule of production through the cooperation of the Administration and our business leaders. For a year or more business has forgotten itself in an attempt to back up the Administration. Unfortunately, the New Dealers have not yet seen fit to relieve the pressure on business.

In my several trips to the Capital I have been greatly impressed with the bureaucracy that is growing up there. It is bigger than anything this country has ever seen and shows no sign of slackening off. Of course, much of this is necessary for national defense. The Army and Navy Departments are justified in their growths; but too much of the increased personnel of other Government departments has been unsuccessfully developed under the smoke screen of national defense.

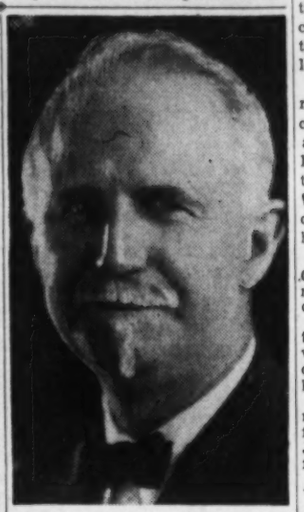
Our present national emergency is a great gift to the New Dealers who, while outwardly quiet, are by no means asleep at the switch. If they had their way I fear they would kick the dollar-a-year businessmen out of Washington and take over their work. The President is too wise to permit this. Such an act would slow up much of the practical defense work which, in spite of everything, is moving along. It would also bring into the open the personal jealousies, the continual bids for power, and the real program of the old New Dealers who still have the President's ear. The defense program appears to have taken first place in the heart and mind of Washington; but it is being used by a small group as a means of promoting further Governmental power over business.

Capital and labor have always had their difficulties and always will. This is really a healthy state. Our high standards of living are due much to the efforts of certain intelligent and unselfish labor leaders. On the other hand, management usually is willing to meet the demands of employes halfway. Left alone, sensible and honest leaders of both sides could settle their difficulties. Neither side needs nor wants Government interference in settling wage disputes and in establishing policies.

The Administration, however, is being forced by irresponsible radicals to take an increasingly active part in the disputes between management and labor. If this keeps on increasing it will end by the Government outlawing strikes and putting both employers and workers into uniforms, at least for the period of the national emergency.

Bankers and investors have so long been subject to controls that they are more hardened to them than are manufacturers and other businessmen. Most businessmen, however, are scared stiff. It is by no means the scareheads from abroad that are keeping the stock market stagnant. Most of Hitler's moves, including any spring drive against England, have already been discounted. It is fear by businessmen of further internal domestic regulations and taxes which paralyzes markets and slows up defense work.

Once the New Dealers were talking about a planned economy. This included fixing prices for farmers, a redistribution of property and many other broadly socialistic ideas. Fortunately for the country, the Roosevelt Administration has thus far never quite got the machinery set up to accomplish this. Now they have it given to them on a silver platter in the form of the Defense Program. The new term for our coming economic order is Planned



ROGER W. BABSON

Production! Through priority controls alone, the Government can plan industry's entire activity.

In World War I the War Industries Board and other agencies functioned independently of politics. Today the program is largely directed and controlled by the Administration's bureaucracy. No organization, except the charitable ones like the Red Cross, functions free of red tape.

Yet, I have confidence this will cure itself if voters will only write their Congressmen how you feel. I am still bullish on the United States. President Roosevelt is getting wiser as he becomes older. Even New Dealers leave Washington when some New York law firm offers them more money! Honesty, hard work and thrift will make you succeed whoever runs Washington.

D. C. Greeks Pack Churches

Hundreds of members of Washington's Hellenic colony yesterday packed Greek churches for the traditional Agapi, or Christian love services, climaxing their Easter observance.

As worshipers stood in the pews of SS. Constantine and Helen and St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox Churches, they turned to each other to exchange the "kisses of love"—(philma tis agapis), symbolizing brotherly love.

Preaching at the Saturday midnight mass that began the Easter celebration, the Rev. Thomas Daniels assured his SS. Constantine and Helen congregation that, "As the tomb of Christ could not hold the body of the crucified Christ, neither can the force of barbaric nations hold Greece in slavery."

Father Daniels' son, Basil, is in the Greek army. His birthplace, 30 miles from Koritza, is now in Axis-occupied territory.

"Greece today has her Golgotha," the minister continued, "but she will rise again . . . Nations which defend Christian ideals always will be victorious."

Another feature of the midnight mass was the reading of excerpts from the historical sermons of St. John Chrysostom, frequently referred to as the "Golden-mouthed preacher." The reading was by Vasili Pappadakis, theologian and student at the Catholic University School of Philosophy.

Each member of the congregation was given a candle before the midnight services. The church was darkened, then Father Daniels offered his light to one worshiper. He in turn offered his taper to another until all were lit.

MAD HATTERS TO NEPTUNE. Next Saturday the Neptune Room will welcome Joe Collins and his Mad Hatters, notable foursome who go crazy on strings. Joe plays a completely unique violin with amplifier attached. This "electric violin" can dwindle to a whisper of melody or resound like Valkyries in a fit of temper. Guitars and bass surround Joe's violin with lilting, murmuring and resonant strings . . . Every silver lining has a cloud. In this case it's that when the Mad Hatters arrive, the Dalton Boys will pull up stakes. You've only from now through Friday to enjoy Kelly, Pete and Jack sounding off on their "W. P. A. Song" and Gay Nineties specials. Also, be sure to ask Harry Dupree, the Dalton Boys' pianist, to play his own glamorsome compositions soon to be published, "Serenade to a Shadow" and "You Walked in My Sleep Last Night." The former will be featured by Glenn Miller as soon as the ASCAP-BMI scrap is over.

Jerry Junkin, barytone formerly featured at the Shoreham and Troika, opens in Ciro's Famous Village tonight, will solo and also duet with black-eyed Cecelia Osso. Accordionist Alber will team up with Mayor Ciro and his French horn.

MADRILLON COMES OF AGE today and will celebrate its "Twenty-first Anniversary Week" from now through Saturday. Billy McIntyre, nationally known as a wit and impersonator, will emcee every evening. All comers will receive a slice of birthday cake and an anniversary copy of Pete Borras' one-man magazine, The Gourmet, which carries a diverting history of Madrillon (but we could add some rare items of Madrilloniana in the roaring twenties), also generously gives away the secret of the spot's baked and boned shad. Madrillon's standby entertainers, Carr and Don's orchestra, the Trio Lirico, June Sothern and Adelita Varela, will be in their finest fettle for the week-long birthday party.

EARLINE KING, who used to warble in the Neptune Room, is subbing, and beautifully, for Eileen George in the Anchor Room. You'll delight in her "Giannina Mia," Eileen has a touch of strep trouble but it's hoped she'll be back soon.

SEPIAS, OPERATIONS AND IMITATIONS are casting an iris glow over Paul Young's this week. The sepias are the King Cole Trio, recording artists of solid swing, who open tomorrow eve. The imitations are by Al Merin, new emcee, include a hilarious impression of Jerry Brandow singing "Hold Tight" . . . still a frequent visitor at "823," often takes a hand in those rousing ting-a-ling bottle choruses that are such a jolly novelty at the spot.

The operation is plumb intriguing. For Louise Lee, who sings so magnetically, has decided to have a scallop taken out of her nose. We're all agog for the new L. L. profile!

ENCANTED AFTERNOON. The Lounge Riviera is a haven of relaxation in the afternoon with Ida Clarke playing the organ ever so softly and the daylight peeking in gently through the Venetian blinds. It's so quiet in the organ interludes that you could hear a feather drop. (When Pete Macias and the gang are going at night, you'd have trouble hearing a piano drop). Ida had amusing competition the other afternoon when little Bob, Peter and Tommy Moran, sons of Dr. and Mrs. Pete Moran, who were snacking with their mummy and daddy, decided to have a little drum and piano concert. They did very nicely, too.

GOOD WILL. Before Carl Fink embarked on his own as partner in the new Plymouth, he was behind the bar in Restaurant "823." He's still a frequent visitor at "823," the Spanish Garden Ballroom than Paul Kain's band.

SPORTS DEPARTMENT. Mike Fera, of Dick Koons' Mayflower Lounge orchestra, wants to get the Night Owl Softball League lined up for an early start. Theater or nitery musicians who play softball are requested to call him at Randolph 6580 . . . That golfing challenge issued by Carmen Cavallaro's Cosmos Room band was picked up speedily by Maestros Sam Jack Kaufman, of the Capitol Theater, and Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room. Carmen now says he won't be able to play until next week because of recording engagements. Where these carnivals of putts and wild swings will take place isn't decided yet. The Cavallaro boys have been playing in Rock Creek. Milton likes the Argyle course. And Maestro Sam Jack favors Indian Springs, where many notable tournaments have been played.

HITS IN SWINGAROO. Bob Mulkey's buzz-sawing of "Do I Worry" with the Gentlemen of Rhythm in Mafair . . . Jimmy Summerville's wicked saxophoning of "Melancholy Baby" in Hi Hat . . . The Pan-American swingaroo or roughish Lina D'Acosto when she touches up "Mama, Yo Quiero" at the Silver Fox.

Bosox Blast 3 Nat Hurlers for 14 to 8 Victory

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

As of 6 p. m. yesterday, Joe Cronin was wearing a happy Irish smile. He was bossing the home run sensations of the American League. His team was out in front with five straight spectacular vistories, three of them won with stirring ninth-inning power blasts. More important to him, personally, were his own three homers.

Cronin has been easing himself off the spot ncely. The finger was on him as the season dawned a week ago. His team had been slapped around by the Bees in the city series and the Red Sox manager had been hearing the boos of Boston fans. His bosses, Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins, had also been hearing those boos, unfortunately, and in the Red Sox's administration offices they were debating a desperate step.

But at this point, Cronin is riding high. Boston fans are now on his side. He hasn't muffed a ground ball, and he started making friends anew when he walloped the first pitch he saw this season over the fence at Fenway. He hit another home run in the next game. At Philadelphia the other day, he hit one with two on to clinch his club's fourth straight victory. Any move by the Red Sox's bosses to bench Cronin's bat would be flying into the fury of Boston fans who now seem willing to abide the Cronin errors which he hasn't made yet.

There isn't much doubt now that Cronin has the power club of the league. The Red Sox are far out in front in circuit blows despite the twin facts that Jimmy Foxx has hit only one and Ted Williams has not broken into the regular line-up. When they swing into action, the Red Sox may take on the aspect of Murder, Inc.

In his hour of need, in those first few days of the season when Cronin's fate was being debated by the front office, the happy Irishman not only slugged his own way into the solid esteem of the Boston fans, but he found a helpful friend in Bobby Doerr. In the first four games, Doerr hit four home runs. Two of his homers drove in all of the Red Sox runs on the occasion of a 3-2 victory over the Athletics the other day. He's just about the key man on the Boston club. Up Boston way for the past three years they never would concede, anyway, that the Yankees' Joe Gordon was a better second baseman than their Bobby Doerr, if as good, and it was not an idea exclusive with Boston.

A joy to Cronin, too, is his outfield. It may be the best in the league from any angle. Ted Williams and Lou Finney provide the punch; young Dominic Di Maggio raises its defensive ability by several degrees, and he, too, is beginning to hit. Cronin's outfield covers ground and it can throw.

For the first time since 1937 when the Red Sox traded Rick Ferrell to Washington the club owns a catcher worthy of a big league salary. Frankie Pytlak, obtained in last winter's deal with Cleveland, has worked no magic yet with the Boston pitching staff, but he will be no drawback. And he can powder the ball against that leftfield fence at Fenway, and he's a catcher who can beat out an infield hit for a change. The Red Sox have better catching.

Cronin doesn't know yet about his pitching, but it definitely is not among his joys. To say that it will be better than last year is faint praise or small compliment. Last year you could have found better pitching on the Ellipse. The evidence seems to be that Cronin will need all of the Red Sox's power and perhaps some that he doesn't own to offset a pitching staff that could use a few miracles. It was not uncommon for the Red Sox to lose five and seven-run leads last season. Only one of his pitchers has gone the route, and he has used 16 in the first five games.

Last season the Red Sox similarly leaped out in front. Fact is that though they finished in a tie for fourth, they led the league for a longer period of time than any of the clubs in the first division. But the experience of last season's late-summer slump is not annoying Cronin at this time. Without its long lead last year, Cronin's club may conceivably have finished last. Cronin is not averse to setting the pace. He knows that the supposed strain of pace-setting is poppycock and that every club in the league would like to be up there in front and risk the dangers of any strain.

If, by some miracle the Red Sox do come up with pitching, they could certainly win the pennant. They have all the other tools. But Cronin is starting from scratch with his pitching and all the power the Red Sox can muster may be wasted. For a stretch of a dozen years, the Detroit Tigers had the same kind of power—Cobb, Veach, Heilman, Manush—and won no pennant because of the same pitching weakness.

Junior DiMaggio Scores on Wild Pitch for Red Sox

Nine Walks Big Aid To Boston; Cramer Slugs 4-Run Homer; DiMaggio Is Star

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Washington's pitching was worse than Boston's yesterday, thus hitting something of a new low, and 18,000 pained fans saw the Red Sox win a 14-8 game. Fifteen Boston hits, nine bases on balls, a wild pitch and a hit batsman were mixed up in the Red Sox victory. Nobody was killed.

The Nats' pitching did not go merely from bad to worse. It began with a completely inept six-inning job by Sid Hudson and became progressively horrible as Arnold Anderson, Danny MacFayden and Jim Dean filed into the box. In the ninth inning, the Red Sox hung around and collected three runs on only one hit.

Completely wasted in the Nats' futility afternoon was a noble effort by Roger Cramer in the eighth inning—a line drive home run into the center field corner with the bases full. Cramer's blow, against Rookie Herb Hash, served only to take a four-run chunk out of what had been a 11-4 Red Sox lead.

Little DiMag Scores

Little Dom DiMaggio was in the hair of the Washington pitchers all afternoon. The diminutive brother of the Yankees' star rapped out three two-baggers and a single, and also found time to draw a base on balls and steal a couple of bases. He crossed the plate four times, once on a wild pitch.

The venerable rookie, Mike Ryba, was making his first American League start at the age of 35 and he, like Hudson, retired at the end of six innings after giving up four runs and nine hits. Three double plays had helped Ryba out of trouble earlier in the game.

The Nats were in front for all of two minutes. Cecil Travis returned to the line-up despite his spiked knee and drove home two Washington runs in the first inning to wipe out a 1-0 Boston lead, but in the second the Red Sox mauled Hudson for two runs and moved in front. Doerr singled, Tabor singled and Ryba delivered a double to right.

Hudson No Marvel

Hudson looked like no 1940 sensation in the fifth inning when he surrendered three more runs to the Red Sox after walking a pair of batters. He also pitched doubles to DiMaggio and Doerr and threw a wild pitch into the proceedings. He might have escaped damage, however, if Buddy Lewis had held on to Evans' throw on an attempted double steal led by Pete Fox.

Hudson, however, looked like a whale of a pitcher compared to the fellows who followed him to the mound for the Nats. Big Arnold Anderson filled the bases with walks in the seventh and escaped damage only because of Archie's diving catch of a bunt. In the eighth,

Dodger Rally Snaps Giants' Streak, 10-9

By the Associated Press

New York, April 20.—Before 56,314 fans, largest crowd ever to see a single game at the Polo Grounds, the Brooklyn Dodgers beat out the Giants today, 10 to 9, for the home forces' first defeat in six starts.

The Dodgers were behind 3-0 going into the sixth and 9-7 going into the eighth, but each time they had the power to pull up on even terms and in the ninth they finally put over the winning run.

Cookie Lavagetto and Dolph Camilli singled, their second hits of the afternoon. Alex Kampouris, who had homered in the sixth with a man on, forced Lavagetto at third. Dixie Walker, pinch-hitting for Owen, then drove a grounder at Babe Young. The first baseman tried for a force play at second, but his throw hit Kampouris in the head and Camilli scored from second.

Sluggers' Battle Ensues

For the last four innings, it was strictly a sluggers' battle. Up to then Harry Gumbert had blanked the Dodgers, while Mel Ott's homer in the first and Harry Danning's in the fifth with a man on had given the Giants a 3-0 lead.

Kampouris' four-bagger featured a four-run Brooklyn drive that knocked Gumbert out of the box in the sixth; in the seventh two walks, Pete Reiser's two-bagger, singles by Camilli and Kampouris and Lavagetto's long fly gave Brooklyn three more, and in the eighth Owen's single, a three-base hit by Pinch-hitter Lew Riggs and Peewee Reese's fly made it a 9-all tie.

Cubs Defeat Cards in 10th Inning, 11-10

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 20.—The Chicago Cubs defeated the Cardinals, 11 to 10, in ten innings today after the Cards had bounced off to a five-run lead in three innings.

The Cubs tallied five times in the fourth, tied the count in the eighth, then put over the deciding run on Bill Nicholson's walk, Glen ussell's single and Clyde McCullough's long fly to center field.

Each team amassed 14 hits, the Cubs spicing their assault with four doubles and three home runs against a pair of doubles and one triple for the Redbirds.

The Cards used five pitchers and Chicago three, Tots Pressnell getting credit for the win after Claude Passeau, 20-game winner last year, was driven out in the third. The defeat was charged against Rookie Ernie White.

Joe DiMaggio's Big Bat Helps Yanks Win, 19-5

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 20.—The big bats of the New York Yankees crackled ominously for the rest of the American League in Shibe Park today as the Yanks staged a furious 18-hit assault for a 19-to-5 victory over the Athletics.

Led by Joe DiMaggio who drove in six runs, four of them on a homer with the bases full in the ninth, and Joe Gordon, who hit for the circuit twice and drove in five runs, the rampaging Yanks shelled two A's hurlers from the mound before 28,874 fans.

Chubby Dean, victor over Red Ruffing in their first 1941 meeting, held a 4-2 lead going into the fifth, but he blew up after an argument over balls and strikes with Umpire John Quinn and six straight hits, good for eight runs, drove him to cover. Lefthander Herman Besse replaced Dean and was shelled from the mound when DiMaggio homered, scoring Ruffing. Phil Rizzuto and Red Rolfe ahead of him. Gordon, who got his first four-bagger in the second with one on, followed with his second homer.

Before the game Connie Mack, of the A's, announced he had optioned Pitcher Carl Miles to Williamsport of the Eastern League; Pitcher Porter Vaughn to Toronto of the International League, and Outfielder Felix MacKeiwicz to Wilmington of the Interstate League.

Pittsburgh Sells Floyd Yount

Toronto, April 20 (AP). — Floyt Yount, 24-year-old outfielder who cost the Pittsburgh Pirates $15,000, has been purchased outright from Pittsburgh by the Toronto Maple Leafs, Arthur Leman, Leafs' secretary, announced today. The price was not disclosed.

Yount was released on option to Albany, of the Eastern League, earlier this spring but he refused to report, saying he would not play in a league of lower than AA class. He will join the Toronto club at Newark next Thursday.

In 58 games with Pittsburgh last season he batted .250.

40,000 Howling Fans See Swiss All-Stars Beat German Team

Copyright by New York Times

Berne, Switzerland, April 20.—Forty thousand spectators crammed the local stadium and thousands of others hugged their radios to listen to descriptions this afternoon as an all-star Swiss eleven trimmed the German national team, 2 to 1, at association football in a thrilling but clean game. There were no incidents. The game was umpired by an Italian.

A military band played the German national anthem and Horst Wessel song, while some 6,000 German spectators sang, the German team gave the Hitler salute and some 34,000 Swiss spectators stood respectfully silent. The band then blared the Swiss "Ruft du Mein Vaterland," the air of which is indistinguishable from "God Save the King."

All Join In

Thirty-four thousand throats then lustily rendered the words in three languages—French, German and Italian—while a sprinkling in the tribunes were heard singing the words of the British national anthem and two Americans delivered themselves of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." A German cheering section armed with swastika flags closed the preliminaries with several hundred "Sieg Heils" feverishly waving their paper flags.

Play was fast and open for the first 33 minutes, with the German forwards overworking the Swiss defense. Then, after a series of rapid passes, a German forward shot a goal. Eight minutes later the score was even, four minutes before the half time. The crowd went crazy. Up in the tribune of honor, the decorous Gen. Guisan nervously edged forward on his chair, and the German Minister politely beamed.

Teams Warm Up

In the second half the teams both seemed to warm up, and the Swiss, taking the offensive, swished the ball down the field along the sidelines. A fast triple pass pulled the German goalie from his net and the ball trickled in, to give the Swiss a one-goal lead, which they held for the remaining 11 minutes, mainly by playing a defensive game. The general relaxed and sat back in his seat. The German minister's beam was still there but a little less spontaneous.

As the crowd rushed onto the field at the end of the game, despite the blaring injunctions from the loudspeakers, the German team jogged to the middle of the field through kids of all ages—6 to 66—and paid careful respects to the gallery on both sides of the field with the Hitler salute. It was not cheered. The Swiss team was passed out over the heads of the crowd to the lockers.

King Pin Takes Team Lead in Atlanta Meet

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Ga., April 20.—The King Pin team from Washington elbowed the Recreation Park Circle aggregation from Baltimore out of the lead in the men's championship team division of the National Duckpin tournament today.

The Baltimore boys rolled up a 1,799 score yesterday to take first position, but the Washington team bowled 1,813 today to shunt the Maryland team into second position.

There was only a single point between second and third place with the Del Rios, of Washington, making a 1,798 score.

The Twentieth Century B Club from Baltimore got a break in the men's boosters team division. They were in second place yesterday behind the Imperial Twentieth Century combination outfit from Baltimore 1,599 to 1,725. Today club officials discovered that in the hurry of yesterday's opening day events the Imperial team was misplaced in that division, belonging instead in the championship bracket. That put the Baltimore boys in first place.

Not far behind the Carter Realty Co., held down second place with 1,557. One point back in third was the Charles B C. organization from Baltimore.

Julian Easterday of Annapolis who set a new national duckpin record yesterday with a 201 still held the lead in the men's singles. He had a 459 total, a comfortable margin over Lou Pohl, of Baltimore, who was second with 443. Bob Liberto, of Baltimore, stood third with 419 while Ham Spencer, of Baltimore, and Astor Clarke, of Washington were tied for fourth with 403.

Carolina McGinn, of Baltimore, was first in the women's singles with 398 and Margie Smith, of Washington, held the second spot with 369.

Chisox-Browns Game Postponed

Chicago, April 20 (AP).—A sudden overnight drop in the temperature resulted today in postponement of the Chicago-St. Louis American League baseball game.

Yesterday's high was 72 degrees. A heavy rain last night was followed by raw winds, driving the mercury down to 48 degrees at noon today.

Village Motors Wins

Don Goodman's Village Motors opened their season with a 16-to-6 victory over the Arlington Dodgers yesterday on the Ballston Stadium diamond. The winners collected 22 hits. Jim Dennis and Bill Shelton homered for the Village Motors.

HUDLIN

Confused by Hudlin's clever performance, only two New Orleans players reached first base—both on errors in the seven inning nightcap.

Hudlin, who pitched for the Cleveland Indians for more than a decade, did not walk a single man and accounted for one of the Travelers' three hits with a double off the left field scoreboard.

Syndicate Purchases Controlling Interest of Boston Bees

Casey Stengel Is Among Club's Buyers

Francis Ouimet Also In Group, Most of Whom Are From New England

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 20.—President Bob Quinn of the Boston Bees, tonight announced the successful completion of his five months' campaign to form a syndicate to purchase C. F. Adams' controlling interest in that National League baseball club, which represents about 73 per cent of the stock.

Quinn said that all but two of his new associates were New Englanders, the exceptions being Casey Stengel, the club's manager, and his intimate friend, Max Mayer, Brooklyn pearl manufacturer.

The others are Francis Ouimet, of Boston, former National Open and Amateur golf champion; Joseph Conway, president of a Boston sporting goods firm; Dr. William Wrang, of Middletown, Conn.; J. W. Powdrell, Danielson, Conn., manufacturer; Richard Hevessy, head of a Boston automobile firm; Frank McCourt, of Boston; C. Joseph Maney, of Somerville; Louis Perini, of Framingham, and Guido Rugo, of Milton. The latter four are engaged in the contracting business.

Quinn Is Delighted

Quinn said that the deal was completed for all practical purposes and that the few remaining legal and financial details would be attended to as soon as possible.

"It looks like a splendid setup and I am delighted to be associated with such substantial men who have such a keen love for baseball," Quinn said. "We could have taken in many others and probably will have at least two more in our ranks within the next few days. During all of our negotiations, Mr. Adams was extremely sympathetic and displayed great patience.

"I am proud to announce that the Boston National League franchise is almost entirely New England-owned for the second time since it became a charter member of the National League back in 1876. It has not had home ownership since the presidency of Arthur H. Soden, back in 1906."

Quinn refused to divulge the price the syndicate paid for Adams' controlling interests. In the past, however, it has frequently been mentioned that the latter's price was around $350,000.

In addition to putting up enough funds to pay Adams in cash, Quinn said that the members of the syndicate also would provide the club with new working capital. Recently Johnny Cooney, the Club's veteran player-coach, was named as one of the syndicate.

Suggestion Followed

"Johnny wanted to come in with us and had his money up," Quinn explained. "We would have been glad to have him with us but for a suggestion by an outsider to the effect that an embarrassing situation could be caused by a player with a financial interest in a club."

Quinn refused to name the outsider, believed to be President Ford Frick of the National League. Regarding Frick's participation in the deal, Quinn said, "we completed it with Mr. Adams without any outside assistance."

Quinn became president of the then Braves back in 1935, after Adams, then a minority stockholder, had taken over the majority holdings of Emil Fuchs for nonpayment of loans.

At that time Adams was about to open the Suffolk Downs race track in East Boston and Commissioner K. M. Landis served notice on him that he must retire from horse racing or sell out his baseball interests. Adams chose to do the latter.

Landis, however, did not demand that he sell at a sacrifice and, according to Adams, was "very lenient and reasonable about the whole affair."

Many times since, scores announced themselves as prospective purchasers. Most of them, however, were dismissed as "publicity seekers" by Quinn and given scant consideration by Adams when they failed to show him "the color of their money."

Marshall Consulted Quinn

Several years ago, George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins pro football team, consulted Adams about a management-ownership plan, whereby he and his associates would take over the club without making any payment except new operating capital. Profits were to be divided between the stockholders and Marshalls' group.

Last fall Albert H. Powell, a retired New Haven coal dealer and a former stockholder in the club, who, incidentally, sold out his holdings to Adams, made what was regarded as a substantial bid.

Powell and Adams came to an agreement about the financial end of the deal, but it is understood the former balked when one of the conditions of the sale called for the retention of Quinn as president, with unlimited authority, until the full purchase price had been paid.

Elusive Indian Tallies First Run of Game for Tribe

Cleveland Outfielder Roy Weatherly eludes Tiger Catcher Tebbetts for the Indians' first score yesterday. Weatherly came home from second in the third inning when Charlie Gehringer, Detroit second baseman, fumbled Lou Boudreau's grounder. The throw-in was wide, pulling Tebbetts away from the plate. Cleveland won, 4-2

Harder, Heving Hurl Indians to Victory

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 20.—Veterans Mel Harder and Joe Heving teamed up today to enable the Cleveland Indians to rap out a 4-to-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers before 19,437 in the final game of their series here.

Harder held the American League champions to four hits and one unearned run in eight innings, but had to give way in the ninth to Heving when the Tigers threatened. The triumph gave Cleveland the series, two games to one.

Seven errors—four by the Indians—marred the game, played in a strong wind, but the three by the Tigers proved costly.

Cleveland's two runs in the third and the winning tally in the fourth, scored by Jerry Walker, who had doubled, on Pinky Higgins' wild throw to first of Russ Peters' grounder, were unearned.

Reds Take 2d Straight From Pirates

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 20.—Robust hitting at timely intervals and nifty relief twirling by Junior Thompson gave the Cincinnati Reds a 7-3 victory, their second straight, over the Pittsburgh Pirates today.

The Reds clouted three Pirate pitchers for 13 hits. Linus Frey drove in four runs with a four-bagger and two singles. Harry Craft also hit for the circuit and Billy Werber had a triple, two singles and two walks in six appearances before 19,060 fans.

After Jim Turner gave way to a pinch hitter in the sixth when the Reds came from behind with three runs, Thompson pitched three-hit ball over four innings. Turner received credit for the victory. Joe Bowman, who was succeeded by Left-handers Ken Heintzelman and Dick Lanahan, was the losing pitcher.

Dahlgren's Homer Wins For Bees, 7-5

By the Associated Press

Boston April 20.—Babe Dahlgren blasted out his third homer of the seven-game-old season with Eddie Miller on base today, to give the Bees a tenth-inning victory over the Phillies by a 7-to-5 margin.

Just before Dahlgren, who had a perfect day at bat with a double, two singles and a pass, cleared the center-field wall with his game-winning drive, Miller had bounced a two-bagger off the left-center barrier.

The Bees blasted three rival pitchers for 12 hits, 8 for extra bases, and appeared to have the game won until Starter Manuel Salvo weakened in the seventh and filled the bases with one out. He forced in a run before Frank LaManna relieved him, and the latter also passed a batter to pull the Phillies into a 5-to-5 tie. LaManna then forced the next one to line into a double play and went hitless during his stay on the mound.

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 20.—That there probably will be a lot of to-do, not to mention fol-de-rol, when Herbert Bayard Swope finally gets his off-the-course betting plan into the New York voters' hands is just about certain. The flood of several pieces of mail which has inundated this desk, since our recent interview with Swope on the topic of legalized horse-betting away from the tracks, indicates a sharp divergence of opinion.

CONSIDINE

Joseph A. Doyle, jr., of Georgetown University, writes that Swope's bill never will pass. He lists as the first of the reasons for its expected failure the fact that the only truly organized interests in racing are the track operators, and that they would either be indifferent or hostile to the legislation.

Bookies, too, are organized in a loose but effective way, he points out, and may be counted upon to toss as many monkey wrenches as possible into the proposal. The public in general won't be for it, he adds, because it has learned from bitter experience that these tax-raising schemes never reduce taxes. Doyle also believes that the average off-the-course bettor, in his or her perverse way, is content to continue doing business with the pool hall, cigar store, office building or factory bench bookies.

Doyle doubts that it is constitutional for a State to invest in or operate a gambling pool, and that reform quarters, though not in favor of the non-taxpaying off-course bookies of today, would be heartily opposed to a State's encouraging such gambling in legal parlors on moral grounds.

He brings up also the question of the furtive bettor, the man who likes to bet a buck or two with his bookie, or bookie's leg man, but who likes to do it on the quiet. This sort would be opposed to entering a public place in broad daylight, or in daylight, and flaunting his weakness for the ponies. The writer also argues that many thousands of off-the-course bettors are partial bookies because they can get credit with them, if they are good enough customers, whereas States have an annoying habit of running their business on a cash-and-carry premise.

Doyle slurs our man Swope to the extent of suggesting that the fiery New York State racing commissioner had his tongue in his cheek when he baldly stated that the racing nation goes as New York goes. Doyle says that off-the-course betting might conceivably come to New York, but that the rest of the country would reject it for the series of reasons he enumerates, and that inevitable political corruption will seep into Swope's legal off-course offices when and if they ever come into being.

"Small Time Bettor," from New York, thinks the Swope plan is great, but he chides Swope for taking too conservative a stand. Swope said that the day of the legalized betting booth in the downtown sections of the cities of New York State would arrive within five years, and produce a $25,000,000 year boost to State income.

"Mr. Swope vastly underestimates the momentum of off-course betting," Mr. S. T. Bettor writes. "What he says will arrive in five years will in fact be here in two years, for lawmakers in New York and elsewhere are faced with staggering drains on their current revenues. They need more money and off-the-course betting promises to produce it almost painlessly, and at the same time wipe out the vicious corner bookies who are criminals, who pay no taxes and who often take it on the lam with our rightful winnings.

"Mr. Swope also seems to believe that 10 or 20 betting offices would suffice for New York City, but there again I think he is taking an almost Tory outlook. I do not recommend flooding the city with these offices, but it will take more than "10 or 20" such offices to handle the enormous amount of money which is today being bet away from race tracks.

"Off-course betting wins scores of new disciples every day, and few bettors ever give up the practice. Thousands of persons who have never been to a race track, and have no intention of ever going, are now rabid off-course bettors. Thus we heartily indorse Swope's hope of harnessing all this untaxed money, and believe with him that the establishment of these off-course offices would eradicate a big section of the criminal element and give the bettor a fairer shake, as well as provide huge sums for the State.

"My suggestion would be that Civil Service employes only be hired to operate the betting offices, and that they have the usual bond coverage. I'd suggest, too, that no money be paid out on the day the bet is won, a rule which would cut down on foolish 'celebration' spending and on the number of moochers and hangers-on around the betting store. I think, too, that one-dollar bets should be accepted."

Sutka in Debut Here Tonight Against Cocoa at Turner's

Fight Scheduled For 10 Rounds; Cocoa Is Choice

By Tony Neri

Harry (The Horse) Raskin, an eloquent teller of tales on the fistic abilities of Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, but better known as the manager of Joey Sutka, cut short his favorite version of the night "he fought Philadelphia Jack," to inform one and all of the merits of his boy, Joey Sutka.

The 23-year-old Detroit fighter will make his debut at Turner's Arena tonight in the main event when he faces the Cocoa Kid, Puerto Rican welterweight in a 10-round bout.

Carries on Tradition

The Polish boy, as Raskin tells it, comes from a family of fighters. The family moniker was first blazed on the boxing horizon by older brother George, a heavyweight of some note. Later Tony Sutka, a welterweight, got an urge to enter the ring and he in turn campaigned successfully both in the welterweight class and the middleweight division.

And now Joey, the hard-hitting human dynamo, comes along to carry on the family tradition. As Raskin relates it, "after Sutka gets through with Cocoa tonight, the people here will be asking only for tea and coffee." Tonight will tell. The bout will headline a star-studded card.

JOEY SUTKA

Meanwhile the boys who lay the odds — notwithstanding Raskin's high regard for Sutka and the latter's impressive drills here—continued to hold the Cocoa Kid as the favorite at 7 to 5. Cocoa hasn't fought a bad fight in all his appearances here. Twice he decisioned Phil Furr. He also beat "Wild Bill" McDowell and Andre Jessurun.

Sutka is expected to enter the ring weighing 157 pounds, while the "Keed" will come in at 147.

Detroit Slugger Holds 10-Pound Weight Advantage Over Foe

Tonight's fight will find the scientific boxer, Cocoa, pitted against the slugger—Joey Sutka. Whereas Cocoa uses his ring cunning to pile up points against his opponents, Sutka throws caution to the winds and flails away with both hands. In his workouts at Huron gym, the Polish boy has shown the effectiveness of his potent left hook in brisk drills against Roy Kozale, his stablemate, the past three days.

Excellent Preliminaries

Senor Gabe Merendez, Joe Turner's matchmaker, has lined up an excellent supporting card. In the semiwindup, El Brookman, popular District fighter, will face Harvey Massey, conqueror of Ernie Vigh. Massey comes here with an outstanding record and Brookman will be meeting his stiffest foe since turning pro.

Jabo Kenner, giant colored heavyweight, is back on the program. He will go against Buck Jones in a six-rounder. Kozale will meet Buddy Thomas in another six and Jackie Cranford will engage Flash Lighting in the first bout, scheduled for four rounds. The card opens at 8:30 p. m.

Ocean Blue, Derby Hope, Makes Debut at the Graw Today

Colt Meets Sprinters in Feature Test

2-Year-Olds Vie On Wednesday in Annual Aberdeen; Notes on Racing

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

This is the period of the great rise and fall of Kentucky Derby stock. As the result of races last Saturday, Maryland fans will tell you they saw the 1941 Derby winner in C. S. Howard's Porter's Cap. New York fans will tell you they saw the 1941 winner in J. F. Byer's Robert Morris. Kentucky fans will tell you they saw the winner in the Woodvale Farm's Our Boots. There is joy in those barns. But not around the King Ranch's stable, for Dispose, the Florida champion ran last.

But come what may between now and the Louisville classic it is well to remember that last year the Milky Way Farm's Gallahadion was regarded as little more than an advertisement for a candy bar in the pre-Derby chatter, but it was his number that showed in the winner's slot after the battle of a mile and a quarter. That's the reason owners will not be giving up very quickly on candidates this year.

Ocean Blue to Run

Havre de Grace, which staged the Eastern coming out party for Porter's Cap, will give Maryland fans their first 1941 glimpse of another Derby hope today. Crispin Oglebay's Ocean Blue will be unveiled in the fifth race, the Lansdowne Purse. Ocean Blue, a royally-bred colt by Blue Larkspur out of Anchors Ahead, the latter a Man O' War mare, will be making the third start of his racing career.

It was not until November 4 at Pimlico that Ocean Blue made his racing debut last year. He came to the turf wars highly touted, and made good with a bang at the first asking. He met allowance sprinters and merely jogged along to win by 6 lengths and there was much Derby talk following that effort. Ocean Blue's only other start came four days later when he finished second, beaten two lengths by Harvard Square. Following that effort, Trainer John P. Jones hustled him off to winter headquarters.

The hefty colt has been working regularly at the Graw. Trainer Jones has had him on the track both morning and afternoon. He has lengthened his drills and his most recent test was 1.02 2-5 for five-eighths of a mile. He appears to be as sound as the proverbial dollar, but his ability to tackle successfully that Louisville stock remains to be seen.

Goes in Sprint

Ocean Blue has not been asked to go a route, nor will he today. This test calls for 6 furlongs, and he draws five opponents, two of them also named for the Derby. Big Stakes, the property of Arnold Hanger, and the Tower Stable's Fetacairn are in the group. The others are the Christiana Stable's Sobriquet, Marshall Field's Stolen Tryst and A. E. Sattler's Primarily.

The next big stake to be decided at Havre de Grace is the Aberdeen, annual test for 2-year-olds. As usual, the Aberdeen is expected to lure a large group of juveniles, including Joe Ray, E. K. Bryson's winner of the Bowie Kindergarten.

At Random—Every time I see that "Challedon, My Challedon" song printed, I get another laugh . . . it was supposed to have been inspired by Challedon's victory in the Preakness . . . tell the truth, it was one of my fathead ideas and Edgar Horn, editor of the Turf and Sport Digest, and I put it together on the way to the Kentucky Derby . . . I had planned to use it on the top of my story on the Derby, but Challedon was beaten . . . so I had to wait until he won and I used it in The Post the day after the Preakness . . . since then it has been reprinted many times and everybody from Pork Chops to John Phillip Sousa has been credited with writing it . . . C. S. Howard's Porter's Cap ran off with the $15,000 added Chesapeake, but if you think that is the only gun in the West Coast barn you have another think coming . . . last Saturday morning Mioland was on the track shooting a handy 6 furlongs at the clockers in 1.13 3-5 while Chiquita Mia, a 2-year-old filly being pointed for the Bberdeen, clicked off a half in .47 3-5 . . . Mioland is being pointed for the $20,000 Dixie Handicap at Pimlico, May 7 . . . nominations for the richest 2-year-old filly race in this country, the Selima Stakes at Laurel, close on May 15 . . . if you have a young gal horse who looks like she can run, you better get busy . . . these nominations are for the 1942 race . . . an example of the ups and downs of jockeys is brought out by the case of Mannie Berg . . . the Baltimore boy was off his luck and disgusted in Florida last winter . . . now he is riding winners right and left and is happy as the well-known lark.

Trout to Be Released In Big Hunting Creek

Frederick, Md., April 19.—One hundred large trout, weighing between 4 and 5 pounds, from the Federal fish hatchery at Leetown, W. Va., will be released in Big Hunting Creek on the Catoctin recreational area on May 1, Albert M. Powell, State fish culturist said today.

The trout, mostly browns and rainbows, have been used as brood stock at the Federal hatchery and are being given to the State in connection with the second annual campfire of the Jungle Cocks, a sportsmen's organization, on the Catoctin Recreational Area May 2, 3, 4. Prizes will be awarded to anglers catching the big fish, Powell said.

Duke Baseball Team Unbeaten In Conference

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 20.—Duke University's potent baseball club kept on its unbeaten path last week and indications are that the 1941 Southern Conference pennant race won't be decided until the Blue Devils tangle with North Carolina for a three-game series in May. Duke's record shows seven straight loop triumphs.

The North Carolina team has won six of seven games, losing only to William and Mary in an upset home encounter. Virginia Tech's Gobblers, who were beaten decisively by Duke, trail in third place with three triumphs in four loop tilts.

The Wake Forest squad dropped close decisions to both Duke and North Carolina last week, ending a winning streak of three circuit conquests. Richmond's 1940 loop titleholder, idle last week, have broken even in a pair of loop appearances.

Fourteen games are listed for this week, the headliners including Duke games with N. C. State and Wake Forest and North Carolina's weekend trip to Virginia, Maryland and Navy. Richmond meets V. M. I. Monday and Washington and Lee on Tuesday.

Hornet to Meet Lou Plummer

A cofeature bout between the Green Hornet, mysterious masked grappler, and Lou Plummer, Baltimore's madman, yesterday was closed out by Promoter Joe Turner for next Thursday night's show at Turner's Arena.

Elvira Snodgrass, the Kentucky Hill billy, will meet Gladys Gilliam, the blonde Birmingham tigress, in the other headline match.

Plummer last week was disqualified twice in his semiwindup match against Len Macaluso, former Colgate All-American star, while the Hornet was turning back Milo Steinborn in 25 minutes.

Plummer claims that he has found a way to unmask the Hornet. Steinborn tried unsuccessfully four times last Thursday.

Roanoke to Face Hampden-Sydney

Salem, Va., April 20.—Seeking its third straight win in five starts, the Roanoke College Maroon nine travels to Death Valley tomorrow to face the Tigers of Hampden-Sydney in the first of three games scheduled for this week.

Tuesday will find the Maroons again on the road, this time attempting to repeat the drubbing they handed the Lynchburg College Hornets earlier in the season. Hampden-Sydney will come to Salem next Thursday for the second meeting between the two clubs. Last season the Maroons downed the Lynchburgers twice and split with the Tigers.

Umpires' Fee Causes Split in 2 Leagues

Frederick, Md., April 19.—Rather than meet a price of $5 per game demanded by the Frederick County Umpires Association, the Tri-County League and Maryland State League, local semipro baseball circuits, voted last night to discontinue relations with the organization. The leagues declined to go any higher than $4 a game.

The association has been providing umpires to both leagues since their organization. William Burall, president of the Maryland State League, said his organization would obtain umpires not affiliated with the association.

Selections at Havre de Grace.

Dear Al,

Horsemen who brought their charges to Maryland tracks hoping to run them in the mud have been disappointed. There hasn't been an off track in Maryland for more than two weeks. But while the mudders have been idle, the tracks have been making hay while the sun was shining. For the first time in years, Havre de Grace has been blessed with excellent weather. As a result, business was high as two kites last Saturday. With $619,000 and some change bet, a 22,000 crowd and a parade of favorites, Brother Burke is doing O. K. up on the banks of the Susquehanna River. Saturday's avalanche of customers taxed the works of the Stevens concessions. The caterers ran out of some items but they certainly were battling to give service. The meeting has produced a lot of rough riding. The stewards haven't done anything about it as yet. Several of the boys are performing as if they owned the track. A crackdown is bound to come but I hope it arrives before some serious accident. The easiest way to "pull" a race horse is to ride him as he should not be ridden. From the looks of things some of the boys seems to be getting the "no go" instructions. At least, they ride horses so they can't win and then, under different handling, they win. I'm not naming any names but the charts since the start of the season tell the story B. F. Hill writes to let me know I have a Texas reader. He lives in Dallas and says he has to wait two days to get the column but it is worth waiting for. What he didn't write was that by that time it is too late to lose money on my selections. Charles Town is brushing up for its big Summer meeting that follows Pimilico. President A. J. Boyle and his right-hand man, Russell Oakes, are busy at the West Virginia track. They have more stall applications than they know what to do with and the usual steady improvement in the brand of horses racing there is again in evidence. It looks as if it is going to be mighty tough for the Bennings Stable's Clymene to knock off a purse this time. But, one thing is certain, she'll be right in there knocking. Louis (Muggins) Feldman of the press box family around the Maryland tracks reports to the Army today. Uncle Sam's gain is our loss. Perhaps you have seen that Baltimore midget who sells papers at the tracks. We call him "Junior." He registered for selective service and he swears he has been classified as "Z-498." See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—COLCHIS turned in a neat second in his racing debut and was beind a crack youngster in Pony Ballet. The time was excellent and this Happy Argo juvenile needs only to race back to that effort. POST HASTE unseated the boy, and ran off for 6 furlongs before that last. With better luck, this one will be in the thick of contention. MISS I. Q. should go well.

Second race—SHOWABAL started 20 times last year, and won five races. His 1941 debut found him beaten off 6 lengths, but he had some trouble in the running. Worth following today. JOANNY sprinted home ahead of distance horses getting ready last out. The Questionnaire mare was favored by the soft Bowie track. If conditions change for today's card she will be hard to beat. SUN SALVATOR turned in a game effort last out.

Third race—ROUGH BRIGADE had to come from far back last out and closed full of run. This one needs only to break in the first flight to turn back this kind. MINTSON surprised at Bowie and will be a factor, particularly if the track is off. OURAGAN for the minor award.

Fourth race—CREEPY MOUSE closed full of run last out in about the same company. Won two on the West Coast last Winter and seems capable of accounting for this purse. SUPREME SPEED is moving up for this, but that last was a beaut. FLAMING HIGH for the show end.

Fifth race—FETTACAIRN was a sprint start in Florida last winter. He may catch this gang in need of racing and I'm going to string along with him. OCEAN BLUE has been working well but probably needs a tune-up. BIG STAKES had early speed last out.

Sixth race—SON ALTESSE turned back LITTLE BEANS in that recent test and should come right back with a victory over these. FOXSHADE probably needed that last as a tightener and will be a keen factor. STING PAL'S last was a fine performance.

Seventh race—STURDY DUKE handled a somewhat similar field at this track and should make it two in a row. DOROTHY POMP gets in light and will be dangerous, especially if the rains come. BURNER left nothing to be desired in that last.

Eighth race—OVERSIGHT has failed twice as a favorite. Seems suited, however, by conditions in this field and I'm going to string along. BRIAR SHARP drew some strong play in his Maryland debut, and could surprise. MISRULE raced in splendid form in Havana.

Best bet—FETTACAIRN.

Robert Morris Joins Favorites for Derby

Colt's Brilliant Performance at Jamaica Saturday Stamps Him as One to Watch

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, April 20.—In a little cottage stuck in between barns at Belmont Park, there's a tall, spare Army man who is caring for the only "sensation" developed so far this spring for the Kentucky Derby, less than two weeks off.

He is Maj. Tom McCreery, and he won't tell you too much about his horses, probably because he doesn't want to be accused of bragging.

After a year of hard luck with two other Derby candidates, Maj. Tom is sitting tight right now, because in Robert Morris, a rangy colt with a lot of heart but not too much legs, he appears to have enough runner to give any of 'em a rassle for the necklace of roses a week from Saturday.

Young Bob Morris' win over older horses in the mile-and-sixteenth Excelsior Handicap at Jamaica yesterday was the high spot of a day which saw Dispose and Curious Coin, the Florida bosses, show absolutely no Derby class, while Our Boots and Charley (Lucky) Howard's Porter's Cap made their spring debuts with some highly successful stepping.

Dispose Finishes Last

For Dispose and Curious Coin the Experimental Handicap at Jamaica was a disastrous affair, although neither stable would say whether it ended their Derby hopes. The former, winner of the Hialeah Flamingto Stakes and up to yesterday the cochoice for the Derby, wound up an absolutely done-in last and Curious Coin, second in the Flamingto, finished a fast-tiring fourth behind Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's non-Derby eligible, Mettlesome. Porter's Cap galloped in with the Chesapeake at Havre de Grace, despite a flying finish by Rocky Palladino's Little Beans, and Our Boots, making his first 3-year-old start, clicked in a 6-furlong purse at Keeneland on a program which also saw Mrs. Vera Bragg's Blue Pair come home third behind two older horses in the Ben Ali Handicap.

The story of the day, however, was Bob Morris—and Maj. Tom. The major had a couple of Derby eligibles sent over from England last year by Lord Carnarvon. They were Robert E. Lee and Rufigi, and neither of them ever got to first base. In fact, they barely had a time at bat.

This time, however, Maj. Tom can take a big pat on the back for the colt which is named after the man accredited with "bankrolling" the American Revolution. He—the colt, of course—is owned by J. Fred Byers, a Pittsburgh steel man, who gambled on him twice.

Bid $3,200 for Colt

The first time, Byers bid up to $3,200 to buy young Bob out of the Saratoga yearling sales two years ago. The second time, he took a chance on some of the 200-to-1 the winter books offered on the colt when they first opened. (Note: You can't get it now.)

Robert Morris was out only four times last year, winning one but never finishing worse than fourth. His juvenile campaigning ended in June, largely because from the knees down he showed signs of developing the same difficulties as bothered many of the sons and daughters of Jacopo, his sire.

He came back to the races at Jamaica last Monday and scored at a mile and 70 yards. Yesterday, although the only 3-year-old in the Excelsior, he was backed down to second choice against such highly rated handicap horses as Hash and Fenelon. He carried only 100 pounds, but at that he was spotting some of his rivals as much as 16 pounds on the scale for age. Taking the middle of the track when they turned for home, he came on from behind to win by a good head, running the mile and a sixteenth in 1:44 3-5.

Porter's Gap covered the same length of ground at Havre in 1:45 1-5 and had to be put to a drive to stave off Little Beans' stretch run. Our Boots, Roy Martin's Derby favorite, packed 122 pounds at Keeneland and soundly whipped three other Derby candidates, and down in the Blue Grass they began to whisper that he may finally be the lad to break the Derby's oldest jinx—that a Belmont Futurity winner never takes the Derby.

Little John Takes G. W. Horse Show Title

Ed Talbert's Good Friday In 2d Place

Showgirl Victor Among Road Hacks; Margaret Cotter Injured in Fall

Surviving one of the hottest and most gruelling days of showing that most horses have gone through in several summers, Col. and Mrs. Charles B. Lyman's handsome Little John annexed the championship of the George Washington University Horse Show yesterday on the East-West Highway grounds in nearby Maryland. The champion, now 10, has been in the same hands since he was 2 weeks old.

Moving with equal ease in both hunter and jumper events, the flashy black gelding won the hunter hacks event, with Mrs. Lyman up, and then took second in the go-as-you-please jumping when Col. Lyman did the saddle work. An additional second among the road hacks was sufficient to give him the championship tricolor over Eddie Talbert's widely known Good Friday, hitherto strictly an open horse who reverted to the working hunter division successfully yesterday to win his lone blue.

Unusually long entry lists and a surprisingly small crowd turned out for the eight events on the card.

Show Girl Wins

Biggest class of the day, held at the end of the afternoon when most mounts were completely fatigued, was for road hacks, judged at a walk, trot, canter and gallop. Anne Hagner's Show Girl, who performed without getting in the ribbons during the early afternoon, came through with a surprise victory over Mrs. Lyman and Little John, second place winners.

Thirty-five horses entered the event, crowding the ring so that the judges felt considerably like owners of a merry-go-round. The 6-year-old chestnut daughter of Mainmast traveled in a quiet, smooth fashion to outpoint Mrs. Lyman's champion, Sammy Agnew's Kitty Vee, and another Lyman entry, Maui Girl, ridden by Col. Lyman.

Nanette Second

The remaining member of the Army family's brilliant pair of show horses likewise took the ladies' hunters blue decisively over Charles Fletcher's Nanette, with Margaret Cotter up. Miss Cotter, riding her own filly, Rocksette, in the go-as-you-please jumping, suffered a painfull fall that sent her homeward several hours before the show ended.

Donald Bradley's good jumper prospect, On Trial, prepared for a planned invasion of the Southern show circuit by taking the open jumping class, with Gardner Hallman aboard. Talbert and Good Friday were second over Mrs. Lee Counselman's Krisite and Jackie Warren's Fairlawn.

Bradford Team Opens Drills at Frederick

Frederick, Md., April 20.—The Bradford club of the Pony League, composed of teams in Pennsylvania, Ontario and New York, started two weeks of spring training here today. The Bradford team is managed by Del Bissonette, former Brooklyn Dodger star, and a graduate of Georgetown University of Washington.

Thirty players worked out today. Bissonette said about 15 more are expected on Monday. Bradford is a "farm" club of the Boston Bees.

Osman Scores in Legion League Opener

Jasper Post Upset Victim In Baseball

Notwithstanding a mixup in the issuance of diamond permits, which caused a postponement of one game, and a steady wind which kept the diamonds well covered with dust most of the afternoon, the American Legion Junior Baseball League got off to a good start at the Ellipse yesterday.

In the three games played, Fort Stevens defeated Costello Post by the score of 9-6, Cooley-McCullough slugged it out over National Cathedral Post, 7-2, and Police and Fire Post upset the dope in defeating last year's champion Sergeant Jasper Post, 9-4. Quentin Roosevelt and Potomac had to forego their game, which will be played later on in the season.

A likely crop of youngsters showed up in this season's teams, the slight raggedness in playing being caused by the short amount of time available for practice before the season opened. Still, the opening games showed promise of some real baseball as the season advances and the teams become more compact units. Next week's games will be played Sunday on the Ellipse.

Bosox Slug Nats' Pitchers To Win, 14-8

Anderson inspired a four-run Red Sox uprising by walking the first two men to face him.

Danny MacFayden walked into the proceedings at this point and made a mess of matters. He struck out Pete Fox and walked Jimmy Foxx intentionally, but Joe Cronin got a run home with a wind-blown single to right and it was the first of three straight hits that netted four runs for the inning.

When the ninth began, so did Washington's fourth pitcher. He was Jim Dean, making his big league debut, and finding it very unpleasant in the big leagues. His first act was to pitch DiMaggio his fourth hit of the day—a single to center, and then he walked Finney. Then he hit Pete Fox on the back to fill the bases. Then he fooled the heck out of Jimmy Foxx who could only knock the ball to the 422-foot sign where Cramer caught it with his shoulder blades against the fence, a run scoring.

The last two Red Sox runs were Dean's own gifts. When Fox, on first, started to steal, Dean whirled quickly and trapped Finney off third. Then he let both runners off the hook with a wild throw past Lewis into the Boston dugout and if there had been eight on base all would have scored.

Hash was no shining success after relieving Ryba in the sixth. The Nats had him reeling in the seventh and eighth. With two out in the eighth and the bases full on walk's to Bloodworth and Case and Early's single, Cramer jarred Hash with his home-run belt to center, but even after that incident the big Boston right-hander was still working with an 11-8 lead.

Finn Outruns One Horse, But Loses Race

By the Associated Press

Charleston, S. C., April 20.—Dr. Arne L. Suominen, 41-year-old physician and native of Finland, saw one horse collapse under the grind and then completed his 35-mile marathon at the Jockey Club Track today only a mile and a half behind the second horse pitted against him.

The first horse, Lady, owned by John Marchotsis and ridden by Pete Trakalas, collapsed after 8 miles of the man-equine endurance contest.

Starting at 2:13 p. m., in the heat of a summerlike day, Dr. Suomnen, one-time physician to the late Mayor Cermak of Chicago, stopped only a few times for a rubdown administered by his wife, and finished his run at 7:28 p. m. The second horse had crossed the finish line 12 minutes earlier.

At the time the second horse entered the race the physician was trailing by two miles. The second horse, Lightning, also owned by Marchotsis, was ridden by Ogden Haynes.

Dr. Suominen raced a horse over a 40-mile course last summer for the benefit of the English Relief Fund, but was forced to abandon the race after 30 miles because of blisters on his feet. The 1940 race was run on the Summerville-Charleston Highway.

Today's race was for the benefit of the Greek War Relief Fund.

Cameo Nine Wins Easily Over Heights

Cameo Furniture hit less often but harder than Capitol Heights yesterday to win a 13-5 game on the losers' diamond.

Capitol Heights outhit Cameo, 16-12, but among the Furnituremen's dozen safeties were two doubles, two triples and a homer. Shortstop Bonifant, with two singles, a triple and a round tripper, was the hitting leader for Cameo.

Vehmeyer, Seeds, Reeder and Shadag each made three hits for Capitol Heights.

Cameo used three pitchers—Hahn, Printz and Deavers—with the first named being credited with the victory. Each hurled three innings and Hahn's performance of allowing no runs in his stretch was the best of the trio.

The losers tried two hurlers, Cowan and Doaks, with the former being charged with the defeat.

Potomac River Sailing Program Hit by Weather

The opening of the Potomac River Sailing Association's annual spring series got off to an inauspicious start yesterday as only two events were completed. Of the 17 entries there were only 2 finishers in each race. Choppy water and the dust blowing off Gravely Point made unfavorable sailing conditions.

Charles Trammell, piloting his Nolle Prosse II, captured the race for 20-foot boats. Second went to Dr. Albert Pagan in his Kan Doo.

Fritzie Zivic To Meet Cochrane

Newark, N. J., April 20 (INS).—Fritzie Zivic tonight signed to fight Freddie (Red) Cochrane in a 15-round defense of his world welterweight championship at Newark, May 26, according to Promoter Thomas J. (Babe) Culnan.

he bout wil be held at the Newark Armory, and it will be the first title match staged in New Jersey in several years.

Penn Relays' Drawings Announced

By Jack Munhall

The District's five college entries in the forty-seventh annual Penn Relays on Friday and Saturday at Franklin Field got only a fair break in the drawings announced yesterday.

Maryland benefited by drawing the No. 2 position in the two-mile race—only one of three titles the Terps will defend—and Catholic University picked off the No. 3 slot in the same event. Other favorable local drawings were Georgetown No. 2 and Maryland No. 3 in the one-mile championship race, and Georgetown No. 3 in the sprint medley.

Georgetown's freshman one-mile team—a pre-meet favorite—was drawn eleventh among 15 teams. Maryland and Catholic University will start from thirteenth and fifteenth, respectively, in the class B one-mile race. C. U. will get off thirteenth and Maryland twenty-second, respectively, in the sprint medley, and Gallaudet and C. U. will begin sixth and eighth in the Mason-Dixon Conference one-mile championships.

Doolan in Second Heat

Jack Doolan, only local athlete entered in an invitation race, will run in the second heat of the 100, together with Edward Campbell, Virginia; Robert Greaves, Syracuse; Almeric Christian, Columbia; David Lowry, N. Y. U. and Barney Ewell, Penn State, who has been seeded. Other seeded entrants in the century are Welby Williams, North Texas State Teachers, in the first heat, and Hal Stickel, Pittsburgh, in the third. Favorite in this event will be Williams, who was runner-up last year to Mozel Ellerbe, and who did not lose a race before or after that one. Williams has been clocked this year at 0:9.6. Ewell, National Collegiate and I. C. 4-A champion, did 0:9.6 in the N. C. A. A. meet and 0:9.7 in the Eastern Intercollegiates.

With Maryland unable to defend its distance medley and 4-mile titles, Indiana is the heavy choice to mop up the current championships, with its strongest contention expected to come from among N. Y. U.; North Texas, Fordham, Princeton and Pitt.

The Hoosiers, with Campbell Kane, Ray Cochran, Fred Wilt and Wayne Tolliver, will be solidly backed to win the sprint medley and distance medley, and are conceded a good chance of also taking the 4-mile event. Kane, the N. C. A. A. half mile and Big Ten mile titleholder, will anchor Indiana's team in all three races.

Hoya Milers Carry Hopes

Washington's hopes for a title will be chiefly vested in Georgetown's 1-mile team which raced well indoors, but the Hoyas will have to run the fastest time of their lives to beat out N. Y. U., the defending champion which won in 3:16.1 last year, St. John's of Brooklyn; Colgate and Fordham, whose 3:19.5 in New York was the swiftest performance of the indoor season.

The Georgetown freshman 1-mile team, which turned in a 3:19.5 effort to win in the National A. A. U. indoor games, is expected to repeat at Philadelphia.

In defense of its 2-mile championship Maryland will send out Gene Ochsenreiter and Tommy Fields—only holdover members of the Terps' remarkable cleanup of three title in 1940—Bob Condon and either Randall Cronin or Tom Devlin.

Coach Coleman Headley has entered both the championship and the Class B mile relays, but may compete only in the latter. His team would comprise Ochenreiter and Joe Murphy, the Southern Conference sprint champion, and two runners yet to be selected. Time trials during the week will determine the other participants.

Collado Hoya Frosh Star

Running for the Old Liners in the sprint medley will be Ochsenreiter, 440; Fields, 880, and either Murphy, Lou Chacos, Devlin or Bob Montgomery in the two 220 stints.

Georgetown's starting varsity 1-will team probably will be composed of Charlie Neumeyer, Ken Lyden, Charley Williams and Mort Alnwick. Their average time indoors was about 3:21. Outdoors, Coach Hap Hardell hopes his quartet can do about 3:17.

The Hoya freshman 1-mile relay men will feature Lou Collado, the former Seton Hall prepar star and best looking middle distance runner the Hilltop has seen for some time.

G. W. Nine Meets American; C. U. Trackmen Busy

An intracity baseball game between George Washington and American University on the East Ellipse, and a dual track meet involving Villanova and Catholic University at Brookland are on today's college sports schedule.

Both events are scheduled for 2:30 p. m.

George Washington, victorious in three of six starts, will be favored over the Eagles, who haven't yet won a game. Frank McGinnis, a big right-hander, probably will start for the Colonials. He will be faced by either Rudy Zimple or Bill Garland.

Petworth Bows, 7 to 1

The Sacred Heart A. C. defeated the Petworth nine, 7-1, yesterday on the Georgetown Medical Field. Melvin Baiulsir allowed the losers 1 hit, while collecting 2 and driving in 3 runs.

Charlotte Hall Plays Briarley M. A. Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., April 20.—Cadet athletes of Charlotte Hall Military Academy will shake off the dust of Easter-vacation activity this week with a well-rounded card on three sports fronts, chief of which is baseball.

The Charlotte Hall varsity, an 11-10 loser to Devitt Prep just before the holidays, will swing back into action against three tough foes, all of whom beat the locals last season.

Tomorrow will find Charlotte Hall invading Ammendale, Md., for a clash with the high-flying Briarley Military Academy nine in the first game of a two-game series that will have a definite bearing on the outcome of the Maryland military schools' championship series. Briarley defeated the Black and Gold in a two-out-of-three-game series for the title last year.

Play Gonzaga Friday

On Wednesday the locals will return home to face Gaithersburg High, while Friday will see Gonzaga High School, of Washington, invading Charlotte Hall for the initial "big game" of the year on the home field.

Coach Pop Ehringer will toss Bill Granlund, his best hurler, at Briarley tomorrow, then will pitch Junie Dyson against Gaithersburg on Wednesday. Grantlund then will be ready to go against Gonzaga on Friday. Bud Rector, a fast-improving right-hander, will be ready for relief duty in all three games.

The Charlotte Hall tennis team will see action twice during the week, facing Baltimore Friends at Baltimore tomorrow and meeting Roosevelt High School in Washington on Tuesday. The Cadet netmen dropped their only match to date this season to Devitt Prep.

The Charlotte Hall junior varsity baseball team will get back into action on Wednesday when it meets Anacostia High School's "B" squad in Washington. The Cadet jayvees have split even in two starts this year.

Frank Fraley to Pilot Frederick Semipros

Frederick, Md., April 20.—Frank Fraley, veteran right-handed pitcher, will manage the Frederick Hustlers, local semipro nine, this season. Fraley, who pitched in the Blue Ridge League and with Decatur in the Three Eye League, succeeds Ray Gardner, former Cleveland Indian shortstop, who has retired from baseball.

The Hustlers will open the season on April 27 with the Cameo Furniture team of Washington at McCurdy Field. Austin F. Angleberger continues as business manager of the Hustlers.

'64 Bale of Cotton Picked and Picked

Laurens, S. C. (AP).—Hall Fleming has a bale of cotton in a warehouse here which was picked and ginned by slave labor in 1864.

Originally the bale weighed more than 500 pounds, but souvenir hunters carried away almost half. The bale originally was bound with rope. It wore away long ago and modern steel ties were used in rebaling. Now it needs rebaling again.

Artist Bewails Apathy of Age Toward Ornate

By the Associated Press

Hawthorne, Calif., April 21.—Felix Peano is a man discouraged by the tempo of life in a machine age which has little time for non-utilitarian art.

The short, grey-bearded, 79-year-old architect-sculptor deplores the fact that streamline-minded people pay little attention to intricate and ornate art while spending millions for machine castings, the implements of war.

It was not once so. Peano's first commission as a youth was the sculptural design for the old Philadelphia Inquirer. Others included the Spreckels Theater at San Diego and St. Vibiana's Cathedral at Los Angeles.

For years he was an architect and sculptor in San Francisco, and a lecturer at the Lick School of Mechanical Arts. Jack London was his close friend and wrote several of his novels at the Peano home, a showplace of Oakland.

Native of Italy

"I came to southern California at the turn of the century," says Peano, a native of Turin, Italy. "I came to recreate, for an industrialist, the Venice of my childhood—a beautiful city of canals.

"I built an imposing home for myself. The principal entrance was by means of a gondola upon which one floated right into the living room.

"But the promoter of the plan became interested in automobiles and called for streets, instead of canals. Then some dromedaries and monkeys were installed, as a beach attraction, from a circus up in Oregon.

"My Venice began to smell like a fox farm. I got disgusted and moved 4 miles up the coast to the Santa Monica Palisades, where I built a beautiful home, later destroyed by fire."

Peano now lives in a small Moorish-style "castle," complete to spiral staircase, which he built here years ago. The flat roof is his sleeping porch, and a tile-lined pool in front of the house eventually is to be deepened—"so I can dive from bed into my morning bath."

Monkey Guards Door

The garden, filled with Peano statuary, is surrounded by a high fence. A bronze monkey guards the doorway. Peano requires each feminine visitor to kiss it for luck.

But Peano finds little comfort living among his statuary if the people do not appreciate it. He says.

"I can make beautiful Los Angeles clocks—a clock with angels and with butterflies telling the time. But no store will stock them.

"I have a love clock, with cupids and a little doorway for the husband and wife's pictures, which tell time, not by hours, but by one love, or two love, and so on. Store managers laugh at me and say they cannot sell goods that have to be explained."

Ancient Art Revived

Peano has revived the ancient art of sand-casting of bronze, which was used by Cellini in approaching the perfection of nature by making wax models of flowers, placing them in sand molds and melting out the wax to leave a flowered cast.

"Instead of wax," says Peano, "I use real flowers, picked from my own garden. After placing the flowers in the sand, I reduce them to ashes by heat treatment and blow out the ashes, leaving a perfect impression showing every delicate detail."

Peano has a magnificently cast door panel.

"That represents six years of work," he says.

"It cannot be duplicated anywhere. Yet, because Americans are not interested, it is not worth a cent, except as junk."

New York, April 20 (AP).—Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, wife of Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky, will sponsor the American President Lines' sixth new passenger-cargo liner, the President Van Bureau, which will be launched on May 1 at the yard of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co.

The President Van Buren is of 9,300 gross tons, with a length of 493 feet, and will accommodate about 199 passengers, all in outside staterooms. She will carry 135 officers and members of the crew.

Rounding out a decade of broadcasting, Kate Smith brings a gala anniversary program to the Nation's listeners with the presentation of the "Kate Smith Hour" over WJSV and the Columbia Broadcasting System on Friday, April 25.

William S. Paley, president of CBS, who ten years ago signed Miss Smith to her first radio contract, is to be among those appearing on the program to extend congratulations to one of the best-loved radio personalities in the history of the industry. Another well-wisher will be Clarence Frances, president of the General Foods Corporation, present sponsor of Miss Smith's program.

In addition to singing, Miss Smith will observe the anniversary by taking the starring role in Bernard Schoenfeld's now famous radio play, "Johnny Appleseed." Incidentally, the anniversary program will be in the form of a double celebration. A few days after the program—on May 1—Miss Smith will be 32 years old.

During her ten years on the air—she has appeared exclusively over the Columbia network—Miss Smith has introduced scores of new stars to the radio public. Among those who got their first start with Kate Smith were Ezra Stone of the Aldrich Family; Abbott and Costello, Henny Youngman, Ted Straeter, Bea Wain and Adelaide Moffett.

What call do you make?

Answers

1. You should try to establish a trick before declarer knocks out your ace to provide discards on dummy's spade suit. Your best play is the four of diamonds. If partner holds the queen, you should be able to take a spade and a diamond trick and defeat the contract.

2. Four hearts. Partner has shown a pretty good hand else he'd have passed your two no-trump bid, and so game appears likely. The final contract should be hearts, not spades, as partner's bidding indicates he holds six hearts and four spades.

Work Starts On Bethesda Park Theater

Work has been started on a sylvan theater for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Recreation Center, Montgomery County Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw announced yesterday.

The theater is one unit of an extensive development of recreational facilities planned for the 20-acre tract which formerly was the Department of Agricultural animal experimental station. The land was ceded to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission after civic and business groups of the Bethesda area had urged a recreation center for the area.

The main, three-story brick building has been open to community meetings for some time. It now houses the Montgomery County Red Cross Chapter headquarters and the Selective Service Board No. 3 for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area.

To Have Large Stage

The outdoor theater will have a stage approximately 75 feet wide and 30 feet deep and raised 4 feet higher than the orchestra pit. The wings will be shielded by shrubbery and will contain dressing rooms on each side while the backdrop will be formed by tall cedars and other evergreens.

The audience will be seated on grassy sward gently sloping from the rear to the stage with a capacity of approximately 1,000. The theater will be approached by blue stone surfaced walks.

The theater will be available for outdoor meetings, theatrical productions of a community nature and possibly for summer vespers services on Sundays.

The project is under direction of William R. Hall, landscape architect for the Park and Planning Commission.

Sports Facilities

Other plans for the development include construction of five new tennis courts, a football field, track, an assembly field, baseball and softball diamonds, separate cabins for Boy and Girl Scouts meetings and camping trips, a fieldhouse with storage space and lockers for players and an office for the full-time recreational director, who at present is Harry Callaghan, and shower facilities for players.

It is hoped to have the athletic facilities ready for the annual field day of the county public schools, according to Architect Hall.

When the plant is completed it is expected that Bethesda-Chevy Chase will have one of the best recreation parks in the Washington area, Hall said.

Snoqualmie Falls Lumber Strikers Return Today

Snoqualmie, Wash., April 20 (AP).—The big Snoqualmie Falls Lumber Mill, a division of the Weyerhauser Timber Co. which normally employs about 1,000 workers and loggers, will reopen tomorrow after a six-months' shutdown because of a strike.

The A. F. of L. Lumber and Sawmill Workers' local voted to accept an agreement drawn up by the National Defense Mediation Board. No details of the agreement were announced by the board, but it was learned the company had granted a 5-cent-an-hour increase over the September rate, making a base pay of 67½ cents an hour and upward.

The union had asked a 7½-cent-an-hour increase whhen it struck October 28, while the company already had offered a 4 to 5 per cent increase, or roughly 3 cents an hour.

Under the board's tterms, the union and company will negotiate a union demand for a week's vacation with pay.

Yuma, Ariz., April 20.—Constance Bennett, member of the famous stage and screen family, and Gilbert Roland, film actor, were married today by the Rev. J. C. Bobb, retired Presbyterian pastor.

Roland said honeymoon plans were "up in the air."

It was the first marriage for the actor, whose true name is Luis Damaso Alonzo, and the fourth for Miss Bennett. Both are 35. She was born in New York, the daughter of Actor Richard Bennett and the sister of Joan Bennett and Barbara Bennett Downey.

The actress was first married in 1921, when she eloped with Chester Moorehead, son of a Chicago surgeon. The marriage was annulled two years later.

Miss Bennett and Philip Plant, wealthy New Yorker, were wed in 1924 and divorced in 1929. She and Henri de la Falaise de la Coudraye, known to Hollywood friends as "Hank," were married in Beverly Hills in 1931.

They had been separated several years when she divorced him in Reno last November 14 on a charge of desertion. De la Falaise, former husband of Gloria Swanson, was then in France.

Roland is a native of Chihuahua, Mexico, the son of Francisco Alonzo, who had been a bullfighter in motion pictures for more than a decade.

Miss Bennett one time was the highest-paid film actress but has made few pictures in recent years.

Last year she was in Noel Coward's stage play "Easy." While she and Anita Louise were playing in Chicago in January, 1940, they reported five men had robbed them of $28,095 and $5,000, respectively in Jewels.

Th newlyweds plan to live in Hollywood, where Miss Bennett soon will begin work in a new picture. Roland is booked for a radio program in New York next week.

Alexandria Asked To Help Furnish Club for Selectees

The Alexandria Defense Council has asked for public cooperation in its program to furnish a recreation center for visiting soldiers, and is seeking contributions of furniture and other articles which may be of use in the service club, according to Mrs. F. M. Dillard, equipment chairman for the council.

A building on the 100 block of North St. Asaph Street has been selected as the site of the service club, and the City Council is now studying plans for renovation of the structure.

The council has no source of income other than $1,200 allocated by the City Council for rental and equipment, Mrs. Dillard said, and must depend on private donations to furnish the recreation center. Tables, chairs and miscellaneous furniture are sought by the council, and all persons having contributions are requested to telephone the equipment chairman at Temple 1569.

Dr. Tiffany Urges Personality Study

Lexington, Va., April 20 (AP).—Dr. Henry W. Tiffany, of Norfolk, speaking on the centennial program of the Manly Memorial Baptist Church today, said that the word "personality" had been cheapened in recent years and urged that "our watchword should be forward to the higher man."

"Personality is vaster and more significant than the material universe," said the Norfolk Baptist preacher. "Man has explored the planets and now it is time to explore his person. We cannot reconstruct the social order until we have a more thorough knowledge of man as a social unit."

Special services will be held throughout May at the church, founded May 8, 1841, to be climaxed by a homecoming celebration May 5.

Gov. Heil's Firm Grants Pay Rise In C. I. O. Contract

Milwaukee, April 20 (AP).—Signing of a new one-year contract covering 1,500 production workers with the C. I. O. steel workers organization committee, was announced today by officials of the Heil Co., of which Gov. Julius P. Heil is president.

Company and union leaders declined to disclose contents of the agreement other than that it provided for an additional $175,000 in salaries and $60,000 in paid vacations annually and the continuation of operations without loss of time.

Joseph F. Heil, executive vice president, said adjustments were made to "keep pace with changing conditions, but the general provisions remain essentially the same as those on which we have negotiated our union agreements successfully for the past four years."

The company is making airplane refueling units for the defense program, truck bodies, oil burners, snow plows and road building equipment.

Edwin S. Smith Charges Plot Against Labor

To accuse workers who strike to "achieve a more equitable share of the products of industry" of Communism, is a "serious betrayal of democracy," Edwin S. Smith, a member of the National Labor Relations Board, said last night.

He address aproximately 300 persons at the closing session of the National Action Conference for Civil Rights at the Press Club auditorium.

"At the present time, with plenty of propaganda afoot which to link Communists and Fascists in an unholy alliance, there is once again a very real attack on American labor," he said.

"Consider the state of mind of the American workers engaged in defense industries. The financial pages of the newspapers are replete with accounts of soaring manufacturing profits. The worker is daily made aware of the growing disparity between his income and what he can buy with it.

"To raise the cry of communism against labor for exercising its economic strength in order to achieve a more equitable share of the product of industry is a serious betrayal of democracy and one that may have far-reaching consequences.

Clifford T. McAvoy, deputy commissioner of Welfare for New York City, told the group that "a new inquisition is sweeping the United States today."

He declared that "Torquemada has returned to life in the person of thousands of petty demagogues calling themselves patriots, and is engaged in a genuinely subversive plot to make adherence to fundamental American principles, particularly the Bill of Rights, synonymous with communism, treachery and what is termed un-Americanism."

Citing a report of the Temporary National Economic Committee, McAvoy said:

"This report makes abundantly clear what honest economists and political scientists have known and stated for a long time, namely, that business monopoly already has obtained what amounts to a stranglehold over the economic conditions which determine the daily existence of millions of American citizens and that, not satisfied with this economic control, business monopoly is using every propaganda device known to pressure groups to supplement economic control over the lives of the people with political control."

Similar steps preceded fascism in Italy, Germany and Spain, and the downfall of France, he said.
